ONE: Definitions

The Arabic word h̲adeeth basically means ‘an item of news, conversation, a tale, a story or a report,’ whether historical or legendary, true or false, relating to the present or the past. Its secondary meaning as an adjective is ‘new’ as opposed to qadeem, ‘old’. However, like other Arabic words (e.g. s̲alaah, zakaah), its meaning changed in Islaam. From the time of the Prophet (ﷺ), his stories and communications dominated all other forms of communication. Consequently, the term h̲adeeth began to be used almost exclusively for reports that spoke of his actions and sayings.[1]

Usage of the Word h̲adeeth

The term h̲adeeth has been used in both the Qur’aan[2] and the prophetic traditions according to all of its linguistic meanings. The following three categories are the most notable usages. It has been used to mean:

a) The Qur’aan itself

﴿فَذَرْنِي وَمَنْ يُكَذِّبُ بِهَذَا الْحَدِيْث﴾

“Then leave Me alone with those who reject this communication[3].”(Soorah al-Qalam, 68: 44)

((إِنَّ أَحْسَنَ الْحَدِيثِ كِتَابُ اللهِ))

“Indeed, the best form of communication is the Book of Allaah…”[4]

b) A historical story

"Has the story of Moses reached you?"

(Soorah Taahaa, 20: 9)

((حَدِّثُوا عَنْ بَنِي إِسْرَائِيلَ وَلاَ حَرَجَ))

c) A general conversation

﴿ وَإِذَا أَسَرَّ النَّبِيُّ إِلَى بَعْضِ أَزْوَاجِهِ حَدِيثاً﴾

"When the Prophet confided in one of his wives…"

(Soorah at-Tahreem, (66): 3)

from the Prophet of his actions, sayings, tacit approvals, or physical characteristics. Scholars of Islaamic Law do not include the physical appearance of the Prophet in their definition.

Importance of Hadeeth:

1. Revelation

The Prophet's sayings and actions were primarily based on revelation from Allaah and, as such, must be considered a fundamental source of guidance second only to the Qur'aan. Allaah in the Qur'aan said concerning the Prophet (ﷺ):

﴿وَ مَا يَنْطِقُ عَنِ الْهَوَى إِنْ هُوَ إِلاَّ وَحْيٌ يُوحَى﴾

> (Muhammad) does not speak from his desires; indeed, what he says is revelation."
> (Soorah an-Najm, 53: 3-4)

Therefore, the hadeeth represents a personal source of divine guidance which Allaah granted His Prophet (ﷺ) which was similar in its nature to the Qur'aan itself. The Prophet (ﷺ) reiterated this point in one of his recorded statements, "Indeed, I was given the Qur'aan and something similar to it along with it."[7]

2. Tafseer:

The preservation of the Qur'aan was not restricted to protecting its wording from change. Were that the case, its meanings could be manipulated according to human desires, while maintaining its wording. However, Allaah also protected its essential meanings from change by entrusting the explanation of the meanings of Qur'aan to the Prophet (ﷺ) himself. Allaah states the following in the Qur'aan regarding its interpretation:

﴿وَ أَنْزَلْنا إِلَيْكَ الذِّكْرَ لِتُبَيِّنَ لِلنَّاسِ مَا نُزِّلَ إِلَيْهِم﴾

"And I revealed to you the Reminder (Qur'aan) in order that you explain to the people what was revealed to them." (Soorah an-Nahl, 16: 44)

Therefore, if one is to understand the meanings of Qur'aan, he or she must consider what the Prophet (ﷺ) said or did regarding it. E.g. in the Qur'aan, Allaah instructs the believers to offer salaah (formal prayers) and pay zakaah (obligatory charity) in Soorah al-Baqarah, (2), verse 43. However, in order to obey these instructions correctly, one must study the methodology of the Prophet (ﷺ) in this regard. Among his many clarifications concerning Salaah and zakaah, he instructed his followers saying "Pray as you saw me pray,"[8] and he specified that 2.5% of surplus wealth, unused for a year,[9] should be given as zakaah.

Sahih Al-Bukhari, vol. 1, p. 345, no. 604.

[9] There are a number of authentic hadeeths in which the Prophet (ﷺ) gave specific instructions concerning the items and quantities on which zakaah was due, as well as the time it is due. Among them is the following narration from 'Alee ibn Abee Taalib:

عَنْ عَلِيٍّ رَضِيَ اللَّهُ عَنْهُ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ ﷺ قَالَ: ((فَإِذَا كَانَتْ لَكَ مِائَتَا دِرْهَمٍ وَحَالَ عَلَيْهَا الْحَوْلُ فَفِيهَا خَمْسَةُ دَرَاهِمَ وَلَيْسَ عَلَيْكَ شَيْءٌ يَعْنِي فِي الذَّهَبِ حَتَّى يَكُونَ لَكَ عِشْرُونَ دِينَارًا فَإِذَا كَانَ لَكَ عِشْرُونَ دِينَارًا وَحَالَ عَلَيْهَا الْحَوْلُ فَفِيهَا نِصْفُ دِينَارٍ فَمَا زَادَ فَبِحِسَابِ ذَلِكَ قَالَ فَلاَ أَدْرِي أَعَلِيٌّ يَقُولُ فَبِحِسَابِ ذَلِكَ أَوْ رَفَعَهُ إِلَى النَّبِيِّ ﷺ وَلَيْسَ فِي مَالٍ زَكَاةٌ حَتَّى يَحُولَ عَلَيْهِ الْحَوْلُ إِلاَّ أَنَّ جَرِيرًا قَالَ ابْنُ وَهْبٍ يَزِيدُ فِي الْحَدِيثِ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ لَيْسَ فِي مَالٍ زَكَاةٌ حَتَّى يَحُولَ عَلَيْهِ الْحَوْلُ.))

'Alee ibn Abee Taalib quoted Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) as saying: "Whenever you possess 200 dirhams[9] and a year passes on it, 5 dirhams is to be paid on it. You are not liable to pay anything

3. Laws

One of the primary duties of the Prophet (ﷺ) was to judge between people in their disputes. Since his judgements were all based on revelation, as stated earlier, they must be considered a primary source of principles by which judgements are carried out in an Islaamic State. Allaah also addressed this responsibility in the Qur'aan saying:

﴿ يَاأَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا أَطِيْعُوا اللهَ وَأَطِيْعُوا الرَّسُولَ وَأُوْلِي ٱلأَمْرِ مِنْكُمْ فَإِنْ تَنَازَعْتُمْ فِي شَيْءٍ فَرُدُّوهُ إِلَى اللهِ وَالرَّسُولِ ﴾

> "O believers obey Allaah, obey the Messenger and those in authority among you. If you dispute about anything, refer it to Allaah and the Messenger." (Soorah an-Nisaa, 4: 59)

Thus, hadeeths are essential for the smooth running of the law courts in an Islaamic State.

4. Moral Ideal

Since the Prophet (ﷺ) was guided by revelation in his personal life, his character and social interactions became prime examples of moral conduct for Muslims until the Last Day. Attention was drawn to this fact in the following Qur'aanic verse:

﴿لَقَدْ كَانَ لَكُمْ فِي رَسُولِ اللهِ أُسْوَةٌ حَسَنَةٌ ﴾

> "Surely there is for all of you a good example (of conduct) in the way of Allaah's Messenger." (Soorah al-Ahzaab,* 33: 21)

Consequently, the daily life of the Prophet (ﷺ) as recorded in hadeeth represents an ideal code of good conduct. In fact, when the Prophet's wife, 'Aa'ishah, was asked about his conduct, she replied, "His character was the Qur'aan."[10] until you possess 20 dinars[9] and a year passes on it, in which case ½ a dinar is due. Whatever exceeds that will be counted likewise[9]. And no zakaah is payable on wealth until a year passes on it." (Sunan Abu Dawud, vol. 2, p. 411, no. 1568 and authenticated in Saheeh Sunan Abee Daawood, vol. 1, p. 436, no. 1573.)

5. Preservation of Islaam

The science of narration, collection and criticism of hadeeth was unknown to the world prior to the era of the Prophet (ﷺ). In fact, it was due in part to the absence of such a reliable science that the messages of the former prophets became lost or distorted in the generations that followed them. Therefore, it may be said that it is largely due to the science of hadeeth that the final message of Islaam has been preserved in it is original purity for all times. This is alluded to in the Qur'aanic verse:

﴿إِنَّا نَحْنُ نَزَّلْنَا الذِّكْرَ وَإِنَّا لَهُ لَحافِظُونَ﴾

> "Indeed, I have revealed the Reminder, I will, indeed, protect it." (Soorah al-Hijr, 15: 9)

Hadeeth and the Sunnah

The term hadeeth has become a synonym for the term sunnah, though there is some difference in their meanings. Sunnah, according to Arabic lexicographers, means 'a way; course; rule; manner of acting or conduct of life'.[11] Sunnah, as a technical term in the Science of hadeeth, refers to whatever statements, acts, approvals, physical or character descriptions that are attributable to the Prophet (ﷺ) along with his biography before or after the beginning of his prophethood. It is thus synonymous with the term hadeeth.

However, according to Usool al-Fiqh science (legal methodology), sunnah refers to only the statements, acts and approvals of the Prophet (ﷺ). It also refers to whatever is supported by evidence from the sharee'ah; the opposite of bid'ah. And in the Legalistic science of Fiqh the term sunnah refers to recommended acts authentically attributable to the Prophet (ﷺ); the does of which is rewarded and the non-doer is not punished. It is also used to refer to the opposite of bid'ah as in the statement: Sunnah divorce and Bid'ah divorce.

According to its general definition, the Qur'aan is the most important part of the sunnah conveyed by the Prophet (ﷺ).[12] It may also be said that the hadeeths were the containers in which the sunnah of the Prophet (ﷺ) was conveyed during his life time and after his death.

TWO: Compilation

1. Era of The Prophet

During the life of the Prophet (ﷺ) there was no pressing need to write down all of his various statements or record his actions because he was present and could be consulted at any time. As a matter of fact, the Prophet (ﷺ) himself made a general prohibition against writing down his statements which were other than the Qur'aan itself.[1] This was to prevent the possibility of mixing up the Qur'aan with his own words during the era of revelation. Consequently, the greatest stress regarding writing was placed on recording the Qur'aanic verses. However, there are many authentic narrations collected by the Scholars of Hadeeth that prove that Hadeeth were recorded in writing even during the lifetime of the Prophet (ﷺ). For example, 'Abdullaah ibn 'Amr said: "I used to write everything which I heard from the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) with the intention of memorizing it. However, some Qurayshites forbade me from doing so saying, 'Do you write everything that you hear from him, while the Messenger of Allaah is a human being who speaks in anger and pleasure?' So I stopped writing, and mentioned it to the Messenger of Allah (ﷺ). He pointed with his finger to his mouth and said: 'Write! By Him in whose hand is my soul, only truth comes out from it.'[2]

Aboo Hurayrah said: When Makkah was conquered, the Prophet (ﷺ) stood up and gave a sermon [Aboo Hurayrah then mentioned the sermon]. A man from Yemen, called Aboo Shaah got up and said, "O Messenger of Allaah! Write it down for me." The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) replied, "Write it for Aboo Shaah."[3] Al-Waleed asked Aboo 'Amr, "What are they writing?" He replied, "The sermon which he heard that day."[4]

Aboo Qaabeel said: We were with 'Abdullaah ibn 'Amr ibn al-'Aas and he

Then 'Abdullaah said, "While we were with the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) writing, The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) was asked, "Which city will be conquered first, Constantinople or Rome?" So Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) said: "The city of Heracilius will be conquered first," meaning Constantinople."[5]

2. Era of The Sahaabah[6]

After the death of the Prophet (ﷺ) his saying and action took of a new importance because he was no longer there to consult when problems arose. The practise of narration on a large scale started during this period. For example, when the Prophet (ﷺ) died, the Sahaabah debated about where to bury him. This debate ended when Aboo Bakr told them "I heard the messenger say, "No prophet dies but he is buried where he died."[7] Thus a grave was dug immediately below the bed on which he died in the house of 'Aa'ishah. In this period a number of the leading Sahaabah wrote down *hadeeth*s of the Prophet (ﷺ).

The following are just a few of the leading narrators of the Prophet's traditions who were known to have recorded them in writing.

Aboo Hurayrah to whom 5374 channels of hadeeth narrations are attributed, actually narrated 1236 hadeeth. H̲asan in 'Amr ad-Damaree saw many books in his possession.[8]

'Abdullaah ibn 'Abbaas to whom 1660 channels of narrations are attributed used to write whatever he heard[9] and even employed his slaves to record for him.[10]

Aboo Bakr was reported to have written down over 500 different sayings of the Prophet (ﷺ).

Ibn al-Jawzee, who provides a list of all the companions who related traditions, gives the names of about 1,060 together with the number of hadeeths related by each. 500 related only 1 hadeeth each; 132 related only 2 each; 80 related 3; 52 related 4; 32 related 5; 26 related 6; 27 related 7; 18 related 8; 11 related 9; 60 related between 10 and 20; 84 related between 20 and 100; 27 related between 100 and 500 and only 11 related more than 500 of which only 6 related more than 1,000 hadeeth, and they are commonly referred to as the mukaththiroon (the reporters of many traditions). Today, a graduate of the college of hadeeth in the Islamic University of Madeenah is required to memorize 250 hadeeth during each of the four years of his study (i.e., a total of 1,000 hadeeths).

From the above, it can readily be seen that fewer than 300 companions related the vast majority of traditions.[11]

3. Era of The Taabi'oon[12] (1st Century Hijrah)

After Islaam had spread into the Middle East, India, North Africa and the narration of hadeeth had become widespread, there arose people who began to invent hadeeths. To combat this development, Caliph 'Umar ibn Abdul-Azeez (reign 99 to 101 AH - 71 8 to 720 C.E.) ordered the scholars to compile the traditions of the Prophet (ﷺ). The scholars had already begun composing books containing biographical data on the various narrators of hadeeth in order to expose the liars and fabricators. Aboo Bakr ibn Hazm (d.120/737) was among those directed by the Caliph to compile the hadeeth. Caliph 'Umar requested him to write down all the hadeeths of the Prophet (ﷺ) and of 'Umar ibn al-Khattaab and to pay particular attention to gathering the hadeeths of 'Amrah bint 'Abdir-

Rahmaan, who was at that time the most respected custodian of the narrations of ‘Aa’ishah. Sa‘d ibn Ibraaheem and Ibn Shihaab az-Zuhree were also requested to compile books and az-Zuhree became the first compiler of hadeeth to record the biographies of the narrators with particular reference to their character and honesty. In this period the systematic compilation of hadeeths was begun on a fairly wide scale.

However, among the students of the companions, many recorded hadeeths and collected them in books. The following is a list of the top 12 narrators of hadeeths among the Prophet’s companions and their students who had their narrations in written form.

Aboo Hurayrah (5374)[13]: Nine of his students were recorded to have written hadeeths from him.

Ibn ‘Umar (2630): Eight of his students wrote down hadeeths from him.

Anas ibn Maalik (2286): Sixteen of his students had hadeeths in written form from him.

Ibn Mas‘ood (748): None of his students wrote.

Aboo Moosaa al-Ash‘aree (360): Some of his hadeeths were in the possession of Ibn ‘Abbaas in written from.

4. Era of The Taabi‘ut-Taabi‘een[15] (2nd Century)

In the period following that of the Taabi’oon, the *hadeeth*s were systematically collected and written in texts. One of the earliest works was al-Muwatta composed by Maalik ibn Anas. Other books of hadeeth were also written by scholars of Maalik’s time by the likes of al-Awzaa‘ee who lived in Syria, ‘Abdullaah ibn al-Mubaarak of Khurasaan, Hammaad ibn Salamah of Basrah and Sufyaan ath-Thawree of Kufah. However, the only work which survived from that time is that of Imaam Maalik. It could be said that in this period the majority of the *hadeeth*s were collected in the various centers of Islaam.

The reason why these three generations have been given special consideration is because the Prophet (ﷺ) was reported to have said, “The best of generations is my generation, then the one which follows them, then the one that follows them.”[16] It was through these three generations that hadeeth was first transmitted orally and in writing, until they were compiled into collections on a wide and a systematic scale.

5. Era of The Saheehs (3rd Century Hijrah)

There arose in the third century scholars who undertook the job of critical research of the *hadeeth*s that were narrated and compiled in the first two centuries. They also grouped the hadeeth which they considered to be accurate according to the branches of Islaamic Law. E.g. From this period is the book Saheeh al-Bukhaaree containing 7,275 hadeeth which al-Bukhaaree (died- 870 C.E.) chose from 600,000 and Saheeh Muslim which contains 9,200 hadeeths which Imaam Muslim selected from 300,000. Besides these two works of Hadeeth, there are four other works which became famous during this period. They are the four sunan of Aboo Dawud (died 889 C.E.), at-Tirmithee (died 893 C.E.), an-Nasaa'ee (died 916 C.E.) and Ibn Maajah (died 908 C.E.).

Stages of writing

1. The first stage covers the period of the first century A.H. which began in July 622 C.E. or the early part of the century C.E. It was the age of the companions and their successors often referred to as the age of the Saheefah, that is, a sheet or some sort of writing material such as shoulder blades or parchments on which a number of hadeeth were written. E.g. Saheefah Aboo Bakr and Saheefah Saadiqah of 'Abdullaah ibn 'Amr. The aim of the first stage was mainly recording the hadeeth without any particular format.

2. The second period covers the middle of the second century A.H. is referred to as the stage of Musannaf (i.e. classified organized work). The second stage represents a planned compilation of hadeeth grouped under headings denoting their subject matter. E.g. Muwatta Maalik

3. The third stage known as the stage of Musnad (compilation of hadeeth according to the companion's names). This stage began at the close of second century A.H. e.g. Musnad Ahmad.

4. The fourth and most important stage is known as the stage of Saheeh. This stage began during the first half of the third century A.H. (9th century C.E.) and overlaps the period of the musnad e.g. Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, Saheeh Muslim and Saheeh Ibn Khuzaymah.

The Companion-Narrators

ABOO HURAYRAH. Aboo Hurayrah stands at the head of the list of h̲adeeth transmitters, due to the sheer bulk of his narrations. He had been regarded by the Prophet himself as the most anxious of all Muslims to acquire knowledge of h̲adeeth. Belonging to the tribe of Daws, an offshoot of the great clan of Azd, he came to Medina in the seventh year of the Hijra, and on being told that the Prophet was at Khaybar, went there and accepted Islam. Since that time, and until the death of the Prophet, he kept his company constantly, attending him and memorising his words during the day, thereby sacrificing all worldly pursuits and pleasures. We are told that he divided his nights into three parts: one for sleeping, one for prayer, and one for study. After the death of the Prophet, he was appointed governor of Bahrain for a while during the caliphate of ‘Umar and acted as governor of Medina under the early Umayyad caliphs. He died in 59/678.

When the Prophet had died, and information about religion and legal judgements had to be sought indirectly, Aboo Hurayrah (who instructed more than 800 students in h̲adeeth) poured out the store of knowledge he had so meticulously accumulated. At times he was taken to task for reporting certain traditions which were unknown to other Companions. But he would reply that he had simply learnt what the Ans̲aar had missed because of attending to their lands and properties, and what the Emigrants had failed to learn because of their commercial activities. Once, when he was taken to task by ‘Abdullaah ibn ‘Umar for relating a particular h̲adeeth, he took him to Aa’ishah who bore witness to the truth of what he had related. His knowledge and memory were also tested by Marwaan, who, having written down some traditions related by him, wanted him to relate the same after a year. He found them to be exactly identical to his earlier narration.

Bearing in mind Aboo Hurayrah's intense dedication to learning h̲adeeth, his devotion to the Prophet, and the various tests which were applied to his memory and scholarship by his contemporaries during his life, it is inconceivable that he would have fabricated any hadeeth. This does not mean, however, that material was not falsely imputed to him at a later date. The fact that he narrated a uniquely large number of traditions itself did make inventing h̲adeeths in his name an attractive proposition.

‘ABDULLAAH IBN ‘UMAR. The second most prolific narrator of h̲adeeth, he was the son of the second Caliph. He had accepted Islam simultaneously with his father, and emigrated to Medina with him. He took part in many battles during the Prophet's lifetime, and in the wars in Mesopotamia, Persia and Egypt, but maintained strict neutrality in the conflicts that erupted among the Muslims following the assassination of Uthmaan. Despite the immense esteem and honour in which he was held by all Muslims, who repeatedly asked him to become caliph (an offer which he refused), he kept himself aloof from factional strife, and throughout those years led an unselfish, pious life, setting an example of an ideal citizen just as his father had set an example of an ideal ruler. He died in Mecca in the year 74/692 at the age of 87.

‘Abdullaah's long association with the Prophet, his kinship with Hafsa Umm al-Mu'minin, and with certain other Companions, offered him a superb opportunity to learn hadeeth; and his long peaceful life gave him time and leisure enough to teach and spread hadeeths among the Muslims who assiduously sought them.

He was renowned for the extreme scrupulousness with which he related hadeeths. Ash-Sha‘bee remarks that he did not hear a single hadeeth from him for a whole year. When he related hadeeths, his eyes filled with tears. His activities in the service of Islam, his austere life, his straightforward and honest character, and his careful treatment of the hadeeths, render the material we have from him of the highest value.

ANAS IBN MALIK. At the age of ten, Anas was presented by his mother, Umm Sulaym, to the Prophet (ﷺ), following his migration to Madeenah. From that time until the Prophet's death, he was his favourite attendant, and afterwards he was appointed by Aboo Bakr as a tax-collector at Bahrayn. Towards the end of his life he settled at Basra, where he died in the year 711, at the age of over a hundred.

During the ten years he spent in the Prophet's service, he was able to memorise a large number of his words, of which he later also learnt a good deal from Aboo Bakr, Umar, and many other Companions.[55] His knowledge of hadeeth was so copious that his death was regarded as a death-blow to half of the entire mass of traditions.

The traditionists accept him as one of the most prolific narrators of hadeeth.

‘AA’ISHAH UMM AL-MU'MINEEN. ‘Aa’ishah occupies the fourth place among the mukaththiroon. She enjoyed the constant company of the Prophet for about eight and a half years.[57] She died in 5 7/676 at the age of 65.

Aa’ishah was naturally endowed with a retentive memory and a developed critical faculty, having memorised a large number of the ancient Arab poems, on which she was a recognised authority. During her lifetime she was also honoured for her expertise in medicine and in Islamic law. Regarding the hadeeth, she had not only learnt a large volume of these from her husband, she also showed a critical appreciation of them, and corrected the mistakes in understanding of many Companions. When, for instance, Ibn ‘Umar related that the Prophet had said that the dead are punished in their graves on account of the wailing of their relatives, she pointed out that the Prophet had said that while the dead are punished in their graves for their sins, their relatives wept for them.

It was on account of her extensive knowledge of hadeeth and Islamic law that even the most important Companions sought her advice on legal problems. A long list of those who related hadeeth on her authority may be found in Ibn Hajar's book Tahtheeb at- Tahtheeb.

‘ABDULLAAH IBN AL-‘ABBAAS. He was born three years before the Prophet’s migration to Madeenah, and was thirteen years old at the time of his death. He was greatly loved by the Prophet, as is apparent from the hadeeths which concern him. He died in 68/687 at the age of 71.

It appears that despite his youth he learnt a few hadeeths from the Prophet (ﷺ) himself. Ibn Hajar (quoting Yahyaa ibn al-Qattaan) refers to the assertion that Ibn ‘Abbaas related only four or ten traditions from the Prophet (ﷺ), and adds that this estimate is incorrect, because the Saheehs of Bukhaaree and Muslim alone contain more than ten traditions related by him directly from the Prophet (ﷺ). There is, however, no doubt that the number of hadeeths related by him directly from the Prophet (ﷺ) is very small in comparison to what he related via other Companions. These hadeeths he learnt through years of hard labour: If I expected to learn any hadeeth from a Companion,' he remarked, I went to his door and waited there, until he came out and said: “Cousin of the Prophet, what brings you here? Why did you not send for me?” And I would reply that it was only proper that I should go to him. Then I learnt the hadeeth from him.

Ibn ‘Abbaas was held in universal awe for his intellectual powers and capacity for memorisation. He was entirely devoted to the study of the Qur'aan and the Sunnah, and was loved and respected for his scholarship by all the first four Caliphs and his contemporaries. He collected a large body of traditions, which he wrote down in books, and delivered lectures on them to his disciples. His tafseer of the Qur’aan which was handed down by his student Mujaahid is well-known, and has been referred to by numerous later commentators.

JAABIR IBN ‘ABDILLAAH. One of the early Madeenan converts to Islaam, he was present at the second meeting with the Prophet (ﷺ) at Makkah. He took part in nineteen expeditions in the Prophet’s company, and died in Madeenah in about the year 74/693 at the age of 94.

He learnt the Prophet’s hadeeth not only from him, but also from many of his important Companions, including Aboo Bakr, ‘Umar and others. He also studied under some of the Successors, including the famous Umm Kulthoom, the daughter of Aboo Bakr. He used to teach hadeeth regularly in the mosque at Madeenah.[71]

ABOO SA‘EED AL-KHUDREE, Sa‘d ibn Maalik. Another early Madeenan convert, his father was killed at Uhud. He himself took part in twelve of the battles fought during the Prophet's lifetime. He died in Madeenah in 64/683.

Like Aboo Hurayrah, he had been one of the People of the Veranda', those who lived on the porch of the Prophet's dwelling by the mosque in order to dedicate themselves to an austere life of prayer and learning. He learnt the Sunnah from the Prophet, as well as from his important Companions such as Aboo Bakr, ‘Umar and Zayd ibn Thaabit. He was considered the best jurist among the younger Companions.

‘ABDULLAAH IBN ‘AMR IBN AL-‘AAS. An early convert to Islaam, who had suffered for its cause, had enjoyed the company of the Prophet for many years, and lived long enough after he was gone to transmit the hadeeths which he had learnt from him. Ibn ‘Amr, although he lived during the period of the civil war, resembled Ibn ‘Umar in keeping himself aloft from factional strife. He was, however, present at the Battle of Siffeen, at the insistence of his father; however he took no active part in it, deeply regretting in later life that he had been present at all.[75]

His interest in perpetuating the way of the Prophet (ﷺ) was intense. He wrote down all the Traditions which he had learnt from him, collecting a thousand of them in a Saheefah which he called as-Saadiqah. When he settled at Mecca, students of hadeeth flocked to him in droves. But as he lived for the most part either in Egypt or at at-Taa’if, and since he occupied himself more with prayer than with the teaching of hadeeth, the later generations of Muslims received fewer traditions from him than from Aboo Hurayrah, ‘Aa’ishah and others.[17]

THREE: Transmission

Tahammul al-'Ilm

During the era of the dissemination of hadeeths and their compilation in the first three centuries a variety of methods of learning and teaching evolved. These methods were later categorized and technical terminology developed to describe them within the field of hadeeth science. The following eight methods were identified, the first two of which were the most common and accurate.

1. Samaa' : Reading by the Teacher

This method of transmission of hadeeths had four different formats:

a) Recitation from memory by the teacher. Wide use of this practice began to decline by the middle of the second century, though it persisted to a much lesser extent for a long time after that. Students remained with their teachers for long a time until they became authorities.

b) Reading from Books. This method could either involve the teacher reading from his own books, which was preferred, or the reading of the teacher from his student's book, which was either a copy or a selection from his own work.

c) Questions and Answers. Students would read to their teacher a part of the hadeeths and he would complete the narration.

d) Dictation. The companion, Waathilah ibn Asqaa (d. 83) was the first to hold classes for dictation of hadeeths. It was not a favored method initially due to the ease with which students could gather knowledge. However, az-Zuhree departed from this attitude and followed this method throughout his life. Later on, some scholars refused to dictate if their students did not write the hadeeths down. Dictation was either from memory or from books. A fast writer was often chosen to record all the hadeeths, while others watched him write to catch his mistakes. Later they borrowed the books and made their own copies. These copies were revised among the students or with the teacher himself.

2. 'Ard* : Reading by the Students

In this method, the students would read the teacher's book to him while other students compared the hadeeths with their own books or they listened attentively. From the beginning of the second century, this became the most popular method. Often the teachers would provide their own copies as many of them had their own scribes. Otherwise the students would read from copies made earlier from the original in which they would put a circle at the end of every hadeeth and when they read it back to the teacher they would put a mark in the circle to indicate each reading. Even if a student knew hadeeths through books, he was not entitled to transmit them our use them in his own collections until they had been read back to the teacher and approved. If he did otherwise, he was labeled a hadeeth thief (saariq al-hadeeth). This was equivalent to modern copyright laws which permit a person to buy as many copies of a book he or she wishes, but prohibits them from making even a single copy.

3. Ijaazah* : Permission to Transmit

In hadeeth terminology this referred to a teacher giving permission to a student to transmit the teacher's book on his authority without having read the book back to him. This method came in vogue from the third century onwards. It evolved as a means of protecting texts from alterations. Its validity was disputed by some scholars of hadeeth.

4. Munaawalah* : Granting Books

This was the name given to the act of a teacher giving a student his book or one of his verified copies with the authority to transmit it. For example, az-Zuhree (d. 124) gave his manuscripts to several scholars, among them ath-Thawree, al-Awzaa'ee and 'Ubaydullaah ibn 'Umar. This practice was extremely rare in the first century.

5. Kitaabah* : Correspondence

If a teacher wrote hadeeths and sent them to a student to transmit, it was referred to as kitaabah which may be translated as learning by correspondence or distance learning, in modern times. This method was in vogue from the first century. The official letters of the Righteous Caliphs contained many hadeeths which were later transmitted by scholars. Many scholars among the companions wrote hadeeths and sent them to their students. Ibn 'Abbaas was a notable example among them in his writings to Ibn Abee Mulaykah and Najdah.[1]

6. I'laam : Announcement

This term referred to the act of a teacher or student informing others that he has permission to transmit a book on the author's authority. However, before any student who heard hadeeths from the book could transmit them, he would have to obtain an original copy which bore the certificate of the signature of the author.

7. Wasiyyah : Bequest of Books

To entrust one's books to a student at the time of death with the authority to transmit was called wasiyyah. An example of that can be found in the case of the Taabi'ee Aboo Qilaabah 'Abdullaah ibn Zayd al-Basree (d. 104) who entrusted his books to Ayyoob at the time of the former's death.[2]

8. Wajaadah : Discovery of Books

If a student or teacher discovered the books of a scholar without permission to transmit on anyone's authority, it was not recognized as a way of learning hadeeth. One who narrated from such books was obliged to indicate that it was taken from the scholar's books.[3]

Transmission Terminology

The h̲adeeth scholars utilized certain terms to indicate the sources and mode of their narrations. These Arabic terms have been commonly misunderstood by those unfamiliar to the field. The following are the most common terminologies and their abbreviations used.

i. H̲addathanaa (حَدَّثَنَا) commonly written as thanaa (ثَنَا) or naa (نَا)

   This term was mostly used to indicate learning through the first method; the teacher reading.

ii. Akhbaranaa (أَخْبَرَنَا) mostly written as anaa (أَنَا) and rarely as aranaa (أَرَنَا)

   Some scholars used it as a synonym for h̲addathanaa and vice versa, but it was most commonly used to indicate the second method; the student reading to the teacher.

iii. Anba'anaa (أَنْبَأَنَا) In cases of ijaazah and munaawalah this term was used.

iv. Sami'a (سَمِعَ) Used strictly for the first method of learning.

v. 'An (عَنْ) Was used to refer to all the methods of learning. It was considered the most inferior method of narrating due its vagueness.[4]

Since the terms h̲addathanaa (he said to us) and akhbaranaa (he informed us) implied oral transmission it was generally believed that the h̲adeeths were transmitted orally for at least one hundred years. However, the records show that many companions of the Prophet (ﷺ) wrote down h̲adeeths, so did their students and their students' students. Furthermore, seven out of the eight learning methods mentioned previously (i.e. from 2-8) depended almost totally on written material. And even the first method involved dictation from written material in many cases. Thus, the literal meanings of the terms h̲addathanaa and akhbaranaa are not applicable as they were used to refer to transmission from written material in the vast majority of cases.

Attendance in Hadeeth Circles

Regular records of attendance were kept. After a book was read, a note was written by the teacher or one of the famous scholars in attendance in which the names of those who heard the whole book, part of the book, the dates and places. If the student was under five he was classed as an attendee, while those over five were rated as students. The certificate usually had a stipulation called tibaaq that no further entries could be made in the book.

During the era of the Taabi'oon, students usually memorized the whole Qur'aan and studied Islamic Law and Arabic grammar before joining the circles of the hadeeth scholars around the age of twenty. Az-Zuhree spoke of fifteen year old Ibn 'Uyaynah as the youngest student he had seen and Ibn Hanbal began his hadeeth studies at the age of sixteen. However, in later periods, when texts were fixed and learning meant transmission of books, it was said that if a child could discriminate between a cow and a donkey he was old enough to start learning hadeeths. For example, ad-Dabaree transmitted 'Abdur-Razzaaq's book and when he died ad-Dabaree was only seven years old.[5]

With every generation the numbers of teachers and students grew exponentially. In the time of the Taabi 'oon, scholars like ath-Thawree, Ibn al-Mubaarak and az-Zuhree made reference to hundreds of teachers. Az-Zuhree himself had over fifty students who recorded hadeeths in writing from him. The actual numbers who wrote and attended his lectures are unknown. The growing numbers of transmitters resulted in a tremendous growth in the number of books and the numbers of hadeeth narrations. It became a common practice among hadeeth scholars to count every isnaad as one hadeeth. Consequently, a single statement of the Prophet narrated by one hundred isnaads was referred to as one hundred hadeeths and a few thousand hadeeths became hundreds of thousands of hadeeths.[6]

EVOLUTION OF THE SANAD

Teaching the Sunnah : The Era of the Prophet (ﷺ)

Anything which the Prophet of Islaam (ﷺ) said or did is considered to be a part of his Sunnah (i.e. way), which represents the practical application of Islaam according to divine guidance.

The Prophet (ﷺ) used to encourage his Sahaabah[7] to learn and memorize his Sunnah in many different ways. Sometimes he would sit them down and have them repeat after him certain Du'aas[8]which he wanted them to memorize, the same way he would have them learn the Qur'aan. On other occasions he would repeat himself three times so that they could memorize his more significant statements. Sometimes he would give rites were to be performed, then he would tell them to do it as he had done it. At other times, he would have some of the Sahaabah record in writing some more complicated things.

The Era of the Sahaabah

After the death of the Prophet (ﷺ), the older Sahaabah began to teach the younger Sahaabah the sayings and practices of the Prophet (ﷺ) which they had not been around to hear or observe. Both the younger and the older Sahaabah used to teach those who had accepted Islaam during the last days of the Prophet's life, and thus never had an opportunity to learn anything directly from the Prophet (ﷺ).

When Islaam spread all over Arabia and into Syria, Iraq, Persia and Egypt during the reign of the Righteous Caliphs, the Sahaabah began to teach those who newly entered Islaam the principles of the religion. They would say to those who gathered around them, "I saw the Prophet do this," or "I heard the Prophet say that." This was how the chain of narration of the Sunnah began. Those new Muslims who studied under the Sahaabah were later referred to as the Taabi'oon.

Most of the Taabi'oon used to memorize and record the statements of the Prophet (ﷺ) which the Sahaabah used to quote. They used to travel to different parts of the Muslim world of that time in order to learn as much of the Sunnah of the Prophet (ﷺ) from as many of the Sahaabah as possible.

[7] Anyone who saw Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ) and died in a state of Islaam is called a Sahaabee (pl. Sahaabah), meaning a companion, even if he was a child.

Why All This Effort ?

It is natural that people try to watch and remembers the sayings and deeds of anyone who is dear to them, and there is no doubt that Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ) was the most beloved person on earth to his followers. The Prophet (ﷺ) himself had enjoined this love on his community saying, "None of you has truly believed until I become more dear to him than this son, his father and all of mankind."[9]

Allaah, in the Qur'aan, emphasized for the whole of the Muslim Ummah the extreme importance of the Sunnah of the Prophet (ﷺ) by ordering them to obey all of his commands:

"Whatever the Messenger gives you, take it; and whatever he forbids you, leave it."

Soorah al-Hashr (59): 7

How could the Muslim Nation obey this divine command after the Prophet's death ? How could they know what Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) had commanded and forbidden if he was no longer with them? Therefore, great care had to be taken to preserve the Sunnah and convey it to each successive generations of Muslims. The Prophet (ﷺ) also stressed the great importance of passing on the Sunnah without any alterations by promising them Allaah's blessings saying, "Allaah blesses any man who hears a saying of mine, memorizes it and understands it, then conveys just as he heard it ; for perhaps one who is informed has more understanding than the one who heard it."[10] He also stressed it by warning them of the severe punishment awaiting anyone who lies on him saying "Whoever lies on me will find his seat in the Hellfire!"[11]

The Era of the Taabi'oon

When the Sahaabah began to die out and Islaam spread into India, Afghanistan, Russia, China, North Africa and Spain, the Taabi'oon took up where the Sahaabah had left off and began the great task of teaching the new converts to Islaam the principles of the religion. They would say to those who gathered around them, "I heard such and such a Sahaabee say that he saw the Prophet (ﷺ) do this," or, "I heard such and such a Sahaabee say that he heard the Prophet (ﷺ) say that." In this way the second link in the chain of narration of the Sunnah was added.

Those who studied under the Taabi'oon were later called Atbaa' at-Taabi'een (followers of the followers). Many of these new students used to travel for days or even months to meet and study under various Taabe'oon, taking great care in the memorization and the writing down of their teacher's narrations.

Only a few books of Hadeeth from the time of the Atbaa' at-Taabi'een have reached us. The most famous of them is the book of Maalik ibn Anas called Al-Muwatta, and the most famous copy of Al-Muwatta is that of Maalik's student Yahyaa ibn Yahyaa from the Berber tribe of Masmoodah.

In the second volume of Yahyaa's copy of Al-Muwatta, in the chapter on the Dabb (lizard), we find the following: "Maalik told me from Ibn Shihaab from Abu Umaamah ibn Sahl (ibn Hurayf) from 'Abdullaah ibn 'Abbaas from Khaalid ibn al-Waleed that he accompanied the Prophet (ﷺ) to his wife Maymoonah's house and a roasted Dabb was brought for him (to eat)... so Allaah's Messenger stretched out his hand to eat some of it. Some of the women who were with Maymoonah said, 'Inform Allaah's Messenger of what he is about to eat.' When he was told that it was Dabb, he removed his hand from it and (Khaalid ibn al-Waleed) asked, 'Is it Haraam, O Messenger of Allaah?' He replied , 'No, but it wasn't in my people's land and I find it loathsome.' Khaalid then said, 'I then tore off (a piece of) it and ate it whole the Prophet (ﷺ) watched me.'"[12]

The Sanad (chain of transmission) of this Hadeeth is as follows :

[12] Collected by Maalik (Muwatta Imam Maalik (English Trans.), p. 410, no.1745).

Khaalid ibn al-Waleed, Ibn ‘Abbaas and Abu Umaamah were all Sahaabah, but Ibn ‘Abbaas was a young Sahaabee and Abu Umaamah only saw the Prophet (ﷺ) just before his death. So Khaalid related this incident to Ibn ‘Abbaas when he asked him about eating Dabb and Ibn ‘Abbaas related it to Abu Umaamah who then told Ibn Shihaab who told Maalik, who in turn wrote it down and told Yahyaa

Following that hadeeth is another narration on the same topic : "Maalik informed me from ‘Abdullaah ibn Deenar from Ibn ‘Umar that a man called out to the Prophet of Allaah, ‘O Prophet of Allaah, what do you say about Dabb*?’ The Prophet of Allaah replied, ‘I don’t eat it and I don’t forbid it.’*"[13]

[13] Collected by Maalik (Muwatta Imam Maalik (English Trans.), p.411, no.1746).

In this case the Sanad is shorter because the Sahaabee Ibn ‘Umar related it directly to his student Ibn Deenar.

Chains of Transmission

Every hadeeth consists of two sections. The first section is a list of all those who transmitted the saying of the Prophet (ﷺ) beginning with the last transmitter to the one who collected it in his book and ending with the companion who narrated it from the Prophet (ﷺ). The second section is the narrated saying, action, approval or physical description of the Prophet (ﷺ). The first portion is known as the isnaad or the sanad (chain of narrators) and the second is called the matn (text).

For example:

حَدَّثَنا عَبْدُ الْعَزِيْزِ بْنُ الْمُخْتَارِ قَالَ حَدَّثَنا سُهَيْلٌ بْنُ أَبِي صَالِحٍ عَنْ أَبِيه عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ أَنَّ النَّبِيَّ ﷺ قَالَ: إِنَّمَا جُعِلَ اْلأمامُ لِيُؤْتَمَّ بِهِ، فَإِذَا كَبَّرَ فَكَبِّرُوا وَلاَ تُكَبِّرُوا حَتَّى يُكَبِّرَ، وَإِذَا رَكَعَ فَارْكَعُوا وَلاَ تَرْكَعُوا حَتَّى يَرْكَعَ، وَإِذَا قَالَ: سَمِعَ اللهُ لِمَنْ حَمِدَهُ، فَقُولُوا: اللَّهُمَّ رَبَّنَا لَكَ الْحَمْدُ، وَإِذَا سَجَدَ فَاسْجُدُوا وَلاَ تَسْجُدُوا حَتَّى يَسْجُدَ، وَإِذَا صَلَّى قَائِمًا فَصَلُّوا قِيَامًا، وَإِذَا صَلَّى قَاعِداً فَصَلُّوا قُعُوْداً أَجْمَعِينَ.

'Abdul-'Azeez ibn al-Mukhtaar told us, saying: Suhayl ibn Abee Saalih informed us from his father from Aboo Hurayrah that the Prophet (ﷺ) said: "The Imaam was appointed to be followed. So when he says : Allaahu Akbar (Allaah is Greater), say Allaahu Akbar. But do not say it until he has said it. And bow when he bows, but don't bow until he bows. And when he says: Sami 'allaahu liman hamidah (Allaah hears those who praise Him), say: Allaahumma rabbanaa lakal-hamd (O Allaah, our Lord, all praise is Yours.). And when he prostrates, do so, but don't do so before he does so. And if he prays standing, do so and if he prays sitting you should all pray sitting."[14]

In the above-mentioned hadeeth, ['Abdul-'Azeez ibn al-Mukhtaar told us, saying: Suhayl ibn Abee Saalih informed us from his father from Aboo Hurayrah that the Prophet (ﷺ) said:] is the isnaad and the remainder ["The Imaam was appointed to be followed. So when he says: Allaahu Akbar (Allaah is Greater), say Allaahu Akbar … and if he prays sitting you should all pray sitting."] is the matn.

The Pattern of Isnaad

The usual pattern, which the isnaad system follows, is that the further one goes down the chain of narrators (isnaad), the greater the number of transmitters. For example, in the case of the above-mentioned hadeeth, research reveals that ten Companions living in three locations, Madeenah, Syria and Iraq, transmitted it. One of the companions, Aboo Hurayrah, had seven students transmit the hadeeth from him alone. Four of them lived in Madeenah, two in Egypt and one in Yemen. These seven students, in turn, transmitted the hadeeth to twelve of their students; five from Madeenah, two from Makkah, and one each from Syria, Kufah, Ta'if, Egypt and Yemen. The total number of third generation authorities who reported this hadeeth is twenty-six coming from ten different locations; Madeenah, Makkah, Egypt, Hims, Yemen, Kufah, Syria, Wasit and Ta'if. Furthermore, the hadeeth is found with virtually the same wording or meaning in all of the ten locations.[15]

حَدَّثَنَا نَصْرُ بْنُ عَلِيٍّ الْجَهْضَمِيُّ وَحَامِدُ بْنُ عُمَرَ الْبَكْرَاوِيُّ قَالَا حَدَّثَنَا بِشْرُ بْنُ الْمُفَضَّلِ عَنْ خَالِدٍ عَنْ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ بْنِ شَقِيقٍ عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ أَنَّ النَّبِيَّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ إِذَا اسْتَيْقَظَ أَحَدُكُمْ مِنْ نَوْمِهِ فَلَا يَغْمِسْ يَدَهُ فِي الْإِنَاءِ حَتَّى يَغْسِلَهَا ثَلَاثًا فَإِنَّهُ لَا يَدْرِي أَيْنَ بَاتَتْ يَدُهُ

Nasr ibn 'Alee al-Jahdamee and Haamid ibn 'Umar al-Bakraawee informed us saying: Bishr ibn al-Mufaddal informed us from Khaalid, from 'Abdullaah ibn Shaqeeq from Aboo Hurayrah that Prophet Muhammad (ﷺ) said: "If anyone among you wakes up from sleep, he must not put his hand in a utensil until he has washed it three times, for he doesn't know where his hand was during sleep."[16]

At least thirteen students of Aboo Hurayrah transmitted this hadeeth from him.

8 out of the 13 were from Madeenah
1 was from Kufah
2 from Basrah
1 from Yemen
1 from Syria

There are sixteen scholars who transmitted this hadeeth from the students of Aboo Hurayrah.

THE PROPHET

Origins of the Isnaad System

Every type of literature develops certain features particular to its nature and content and the character of the people who cultivate it, and the distinctive social, political or historical conditions in which it originates and flourishes. Hadeeth literature is no exception to this rule.[17] The isnaad system was used to transmit pre-Islamic poetry.[18] However, it was in the hadeeth literature that it reached its peak at which it was considered an integral part of the religion itself. 'Abdullaah ibn al-Mubaarak (d. 181AH), one of the illustrious teachers of Imaam al-Bukhaaree, said: "The isnaad is from the religion. Were it not for the isnaad anyone could say anything he wished."[19] By the end of the first century the science of isnaad was fully developed. Ibn Seereen (d. 110), a Successor, said, "[In the beginning] they would not ask about the isnaad. But when the fitnah (turmoil / civil war) happened, they demanded, 'Name your men to us.' The narrations of the Ahlus-Sunnah (Adherents to the Sunnah) would be accepted, while those of Ahlul-Bid'ah (Adherents to Innovations) would be rejected."[20] That is, prior to the turmoil the isnaad was used only occasionally, but after the turmoil they became cautious.

In order to minimize the significance of the system in Islaam, orientalist scholars have tried to identify non-Arab pre-Islamic sources. Joseph Horovitz cited several instances from Jewish literature in which the isnaad was used before its use among Arabs.[21] He further tried to trace its usage back to the Mosaic period, and by Talmudic times its chain assumed enormous length. Whether the isnaad system really goes back to Mosaic times is open to doubt, as Horovitz did not prove that they were not later interpolations. It has also been noted that Indians long before Islaam used the isnaad system. Occasional use can be found in ancient Hindu, Buddhist and Jain literature. For example, in the great epic, the Mahabharta, it states:

> Vysda composed it, Ganesa served as a scribe, and the work was handed down by Vaisampayana, who communicated it to the king Janamejaya. Sauti, who was present at the time, heard it and narrated it to the assembly of sages.[22]

However, regardless of where the isnaad originated, there is no doubt that having adopted the system, Muslims came to consider the isnaad an indispensable part of the hadeeths and developed it. They gave it a firm foundation by introducing the chronological method, assembling biographies of the transmitters, and establishing a science for determining the value of its contents and the authenticity of its channel of transmission. The ancient Indians, as far as is known, never made any attempt at a rigorous and consistent treatment of the isnaad, nor did they develop the chronological method. Likewise, Jewish literature had no usage of the chronological method thereby rendering their isnaads valueless. In fact, Professor Horovitz, himself, admitted that, ‘In the Talmudic literature there is no idea of chronological method, and the oldest extant work attempting such an arrangement was composed after 885 AD – more than a century later than the earliest Islamic work on isnaad-critique. From this fact,’ he goes on to say, ‘and from the fact that the important Jewish works [of this period] had been composed in the Islamic dominions, it may be inferred that this historical interest was due to the Islamic influence.’[23]

The practice of specifying the isnaad, not only of the hadeeths but also the books in which they were collected, was of immense value in preserving the integrity of books in an age in which printing was unknown, and the creation of spurious and distorted works was a relatively easy task. The scholarly practice of certification seems to be unique in the world’s literary history, just as hadeeth literature is unique in employing a thorough and systematic method of source identification. Greek, Latin, Hebrew and Syriac manuscripts rarely, if ever, supply us with such a wealth of information about a book’s origin and use.

The isnaad system, while originating in connection with the hadeeth literature, was in due course extended by Arab authors to many other genres, including geography, history, and prose fiction.[24]

FOUR: Classification

Due to a variety of factors, the narration of hadeeths came under careful scrutiny beginning with the generation of the Companions and their students. The statement of the Taabi'ee, Ibn Seereen (d. 110), in the previous chapter identifies the approximate time period in which verification began.

> He said, "[In the beginning] they would not ask about the isnaad. But when the fitnah (civil war) happened, they demanded, 'Name your men to us.' The narrations of the Ahlus-Sunnah would be accepted, while those of Ahlul-Bid'ah would be rejected."[1]

Once the name of the narrator was known, it was possible to investigate whether he was trustworthy or not and whether he actually heard the person from whom he was reporting. Criticism of this nature later came to be known as 'Ilm al-Jarh wat-Ta'deel (The Science of Validation).

The earliest recorded comments made for this purpose were reported by Shu'bah ibn al-Hajjaaj (701-776 CE). Ibn 'Adee reported with his isnaad going back to 'Abdur-Rahmaan ibn al-Mahdee who said: "Once they differed in the presence of Shu'bah and said: O Aboo Bistaam, appoint a judge between you and us." He replied: "I agree to appoint al-Ahwal (Yahyaa ibn Sa'eed al-Qattaan)." After a short while, he came. So they referred the issue to him and he gave his judgement against Shu'bah. Shu'bah remarked: "Who else has the ability to examine (tanqud) like you?"[2] The term used by Shu'bah was a form of the verb naqada which means 'to examine or test'. Yahyaa ibn Sa'eed (d. 804) was also the earliest of those whose comments were recorded. Ibn Shihaab az-Zuhree, as was earlier mentioned, was the first to record biographical material about the hadeeth narrators along with the narrations themselves.

From these early efforts the science of hadeeth ('Ilm Mustlah al-Hadeeth or 'Ilm Usool al-Hadeeth) evolved to distinguish between authentic narrations and spurious or fabricated ones. The scholars of hadeeth have dealt with each hadeeth as an independent case, subjecting both its isnaad and its matn to close scrutiny according to the fundamental principles of this science.[3]

Although the rules and criteria governing the study of hadeeth were meticulous in the early generations, there was considerable variation in their terminology. Their principles can be found scattered among various books of that era, e.g., ar-Risaalah of Imaam ash-Shaafi'ee (d. 204AH), the introduction to Saheeh Muslim of Imaam Muslim (d. 261AH) and Sunan at-Tirmithee of Imaam at-Tirmithee (d. 279AH). Later scholars deduced the criteria of the early scholars like al-Bukhaaree, from a careful study of which narrators or isnaads were accepted or rejected by them.

One of the earliest writings to cover this science comprehensively, using standard terminology, was the work of Aboo Muhammad ar-Raamahurmuzee (d. 360AH/970CE). The next major contribution was Ma'rifah 'Uloom al-Hadeeth by al-Haakim (d. 405/1014). His work covered fifty classifications of hadeeth, but left some points untouched. Aboo Nu'aym al-Isfahaanee (d. 430/1038) later completed the most important missing parts of al-Haakim's work. Al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee (d. 403/1012) followed his predecessors with his classic, al-Kifaayah fee 'Ilm ar-Riyaayah, along with another work on the etiquette of teaching and studying hadeeth.

After further contributions by Qaadee 'Iyaad al-Yahsoobee (d. 544AH), Aboo Hafs al-Mayaanjee (d. 580), and others, came the most comprehensive treatment of the subject, 'Uloom al-Hadeeth, by Aboo 'Amr 'Uthmaan ibn as-Salaah (d. 643/1245). It is commonly known as Muqaddimah Ibn as-Salaah, and was compiled while he taught at Daar al-Hadeeth of several cities in Syria. This text came to be the standard reference book for scholars and students of hadeeth from that time until today. Many later works on the science of hadeeth were based on it or were abridgements of it. Among them is an-Nawawee's abridgement, al-Irshaad, and his summary of this abridgement, Taqreeb. As-Suyootee wrote an outstanding commentary on the latter known as Tadreeb ar-Raawee. Ibn Katheer (d. 774AH) also compiled an abridgement of Ibn as-Salaah's work called Ikhtisar 'Uloom al-Hadeeth and so did Badrud-Deen ibn Jamaa'ah (d. 733) in his work al-Minhaal.

These books classified hadeeths according to a number of considerations. They were analysed according to the narrating authority (Companion, Successor, etc.), the isnaad, the number of narrators, the narrating terminology, the nature of the narrated text and the reliability of the narrators.[4]

The early scholars of hadeeth from the first two centuries generally classified hadeeths into two broad categories: Saheeh '(authentic) and Da'eef (inauthentic). Imaam at-Tirmithee was the first to distinguish the category of Hasan (reliable) from that of Da'eef.[5]

Hadeeth Saheeh

A hadeeth must meet the five criteria in order to be accepted according to Islaamic law as a source of legal ordinance. Ibn as-Salaah defined the Hadeeth Saheeh as follows:

> "A Hadeeth Saheeh is one which has a continuous isnaad, made up of trustworthy narrators narrating from trustworthy narrators, which is found to be free from any irregularities or defects."[6]

1. Ittisaal as-Sanad (Continuity of the chain of transmitters)

The chain of narrators or transmitters, who are relating the Matn (text), has to be unbroken for the hadeeth to be considered. That is none of the transmitters must be missing from the chain and each narrator, Raawee, has to have met the transmitter directly preceding him as well as the one directly following him. Each Raawee has to be a known individual, otherwise he is classified as *majhoo*l (unknown) and the sanad is classified as broken.

2. 'Adaalah (integrity)

The integrity of the narrators is the second key condition for a hadeeth to be considered valid. By integrity we mean that the narrator was a practicing Muslim and was not known to have done any of the major (forbidden things) if he was a known liar he is classified as kaththaab and the hadeeth that he has transmitted is classified as da'eef. These are the conditions verified through the references of the biographical science of hadeeth known as Kutub ar-Rijaal.

3. Dabt (accuracy)

The accuracy of the text is determined by two factors either of which is sufficient by itself.

(a) Dabt as-Sadr (Soundness of memory)

Each narrator must be known for his ability to memorize and repeat with a high degree of accuracy. If a narrator had a tendency to repeat hadeeth in a number of different ways such a hadeeth is classified as Mudtarib (confused) and any other hadeeth that he narrates will be classified as Da'eef. When the narrator's level of accuracy is mediocre but the other conditions for authenticity are fulfilled, the hadeeth is classified as hasan.

(b) Dabt al-Kitaabah (Written accuracy)

Each narrator who does not fulfill precondition “a”, must be known for recording his hadeeth in books accurately and his narrations only be from his books, these two preconditions (a,b) are also verified by Kutub ar-Rijaal (books on Biographies of narrators).

4. Ghayr Shaaththh (conformity)

It is critical that the hadeeth conform to similar hadeeths narrated on the same topic whose chains are stronger. If the text of a hadeeth contradicts that of another well-known text whose chain of narration is stronger, or it is in conflict with a group of other narrators of a similar status, it is classified as shaaththh (errant), which is one of the categories of hadeeth da‘eef.

5. Laa ‘Illah (absence of hidden defect)

The hidden defect is one that causes the hadeeth to appear to be sound and only become evident after deep investigation. For a hadeeth to be considered sound (saheeh) it has to be free of hidden defects. A hadeeth with hidden defects is called ma‘lool or mu‘allal. Ibn al-Madeenee (d. 324AH) said that a defect can only be revealed if all the isnaads of the hadeeth are coallated. In his book, al-Ilal, he listed 34 Successors and the names of the Companions they heard hadeeths directly from. For example, he said that al-Hasan al-Basree (d. 110AH) did not meet ‘Alee (d. 40AH), although there is a slight possibility that he may have seen him during his childhood in Madeenah. Such information is very important as it disproves the many Sufi traditions in which they claim that al-Hasan heard from ‘Alee. Only a few hadeeth scholars compiled books on this topic, among them, Ibn Abee Haatim ar-Raazee (d. 327), al-Khallaal (d. 311) and ad-Daaraqutnee (d. 385).[7]

Ruling of Hadeeth Saheeh

A hadeeth that fulfills all the five conditions of sihhah is referred to as a hadeeth Saheeh. Such a hadeeth can be used to establish points of Islaamic law and, if it isn’t abrogated, it must be accepted and applied. The ruling of a hadeeth saheeh can only be superceded by that of another hadeeth saheeh stronger than it.

[7] An Introduction to the Science of Hadith, pp. 42-3.

Saheeh li Ghayrih

The hadeeth saheeh may be further subdivided into Saheeh li Thaatih and Saheeh li Ghayrih. Hadeeths fulfilling the five conditions completely were also referred to as Saheeh li Thaatih. That is, it is saheeh by itself, without any external considerations. The Saheeh li Ghayrih is a hadeeth hasan that has been elevated to the status of saheeh due to supporting narrations.

The following is an example of a Saheeh li Ghayrih narration found in Sunan Abee Daawood:

حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو كُرَيْبٍ حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدَةُ بْنُ سُلَيْمَانَ عَنْ مُحَمَّدِ بْنِ عَمْرٍو عَنْ أَبِي سَلَمَةَ عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ قَالَ قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: ((لَوْلَا أَنْ أَشُقَّ عَلَى أُمَّتِي لَأَمَرْتُهُمْ بِالسِّوَاكِ عِنْدَ كُلِّ صَلَاةٍ

Aboo Kurayb informed us from ‘Abdah ibn Sulaymaan who informed them from Muhammad ibn ‘Amr from Aboo Salamah from Aboo Hurayrah who quoted Allaah’s Messenger (ﷺ) as saying: “Were it not that I would place a great burden on my nation, I would have ordered them to use the miswak at the time of every salaah.”[8]

Ibn Salaah stated that that Muhammad ibn ‘Amr ibn ‘Alqamah was well-known for his truthfulness and integrity, but he was considered inaccurate (Sadooq lahu Awhaam). Aboo Daawood stated at the end of the above-mentioned narration: Aboo ‘Eesaa [at-Tirmithee] said: “This hadeeth has been narrated by Muhammad ibn Is’haaq from Muhammad ibn Ibraaheem from Aboo Salamah from Zayd ibn Khaalid from the Prophet (ﷺ) and the hadeeth of Aboo Salamah from Aboo Hurayrah and Zayd ibn Khaalid from the Prophet (ﷺ) are both saheeh in my opinion because this hadeeth has been narrated through more than one channel from Aboo Hurayrah from the Prophet (ﷺ)… As for Muhammad ibn Ismaa‘eel [al-Bukhaaree], he claimed the hadeeth of Aboo Salamah from Zayd ibn Khaalid is more authentic. Aboo ‘Eesaa said: “On this topic [there are other narrations] by Aboo Bakr as-Siddeeq, ‘Alee, ‘Aa’ishah, Ibn ‘Abbaas, Huthayfah, Zayd ibn Khaalid, Anas, ‘Abdullaah ibn ‘Amr, Ibn ‘Umar, Umm Habeebah, Aboo Umaamah, Aboo Ayyoob, Tammaam ibn ‘Abbaas, ‘Abdullaah ibn Hanzalah, Umm Salamah, Waathilah ibn al-Asqa‘ and Aboo Moosaa.[9]

Grades of Saheeh

The most correct view is that it cannot be absolutely claimed that any particular chain of narrators is superior to any other saheeh narration. The actual grades of authenticity depend on how the chain and text is influenced by the five conditions for authenticity. For example, the lowest level of authentic narrations would be those hadeeths which have transmitters whose accuracy is disputed. However, proof in favor of their reliability is overwhelming. For example, the narration of Suhail ibn Abee Saalih from his father from Aboo Hurayrah.

In spite of that fact, some scholars traditionally considered certain chains of narration to be of the highest grade. For example, Ahmad ibn Hambal and Is'haaq ibn Raahawayh considered: "Zuhree from Saalim from his father, 'Abdullaah ibn 'Umar," to be the strongest chain. On the other hand, al-Bukhaaree considered: "Maalik from Naafi' from 'Abdullaah ibn 'Umar," to be the strongest.[10] It came to be known as the "golden chain".

With regard to the hadeeth saheeh, it cannot be said that they are all found in the books of al-Bukhaare and Muslim because these scholars themselves confirmed that they did not gather all of the hadeeth saheeh. Al-Bukhaaree stated: "I only wrote in my book, al-Jaami', what was authentic and I omitted some authentic narrations to avoid it becoming too long." Imaam Muslim also said: "I did not include in this book every hadeeth I found to be saheeh. I only put in it what the scholars agreed upon." In fact the majority of authentic hadeeths are found outside of these two compilations. Imaam al-Bukhaaree himself stated: "And the authentic hadeeths which I have omitted are more than I have included [in my book]." He also stated: "I memorized 100,000 authentic hadeeths and 200,000 inauthentic hadeeths." And the total number of hadeeths in Saheeh al-Bukhaaree is around 4,000 and in Saheeh Muslim is also around 4,000![11]

The hadeeths may be graded according to criteria used by Imaams al-Bukhaaree and Muslim which were considered to be of the highest standard.

1. Authentic hadeeths recorded by both al-Bukhaaree and Muslim. Such narrations are often referred to by scholars as مُتَّفَقٌ عَلَيْه muttaqun 'alayh (agreed upon).
2. Authentic hadeeths recorded by only al-Bukhaaree.
3. Authentic hadeeths recorded by only Muslim.
4. Authentic hadeeths according to the criteria of al-Bukhaaree and Muslim recorded by others.

5. Authentic hadeeths according to the criteria of al-Bukhaaree alone recorded by others.
6. Authentic hadeeths according to the criteria of Muslim alone recorded by others.
7. Authentic hadeeths not according to the criteria of either al-Bukhaaree or Muslim.

Hadeeth Hasan

Linguistically the term hasan means "beautiful; fair; good." However, according to the science of hadeeth evaluation, it refers to a hadeeth that is graded between saheeh and da'eef (inauthentic). At-Tirmithee, who was the first to use the term hasan consistently in a technical way, defined it as a hadeeth that does not have in its chain a narrator suspected of lying, nor does it conflict with superior texts and it is transmitted via more than one chain of similar strength. This definition is quite general and could include the hadeeth saheeh lighayrih (saheeh due to external corroboration). Or it could define one dimension of the hadeeth hasan, namely the hasan lighayrih (hasan due to external corroboration).

Ibn Hajar, on the other hand, gave the most accurate definition of the hadeeth hasan as one transmitted by upstanding narrators in a continuous chain of narration, free from any hidden defects or conflict with superior texts. Except that it contains a narrator or narrators whose accuracy is inferior. Such a hadeeth is regarded as hasan lithaatih (hasan by itself).[12] In other words, a hadeeth is considered hasan if it fulfills all the requirements of Sihhah except Dabt (accuracy). If the memory of a narrator was only considered fair (sadooq), that is, he was known to make a few mistakes. The hadeeth is lowered from the level of saheeh to the level of hasan. In the early days, some scholars like Ibn Khuzaymah (one of al-Bukhaaree's teachers) made no distinction between the hadeeth saheeh and the hadeeth hasan. Ibn Hibban and al-Haakim also followed this practice.

The following is an example of a hadeeth hasan from the Sunan of Imaam at-Tirmithee:

[12] The Science of Authenticating the Prophet's Traditions, pp. 47-8.

حَدَّثَنَا قُتَيْبَةُ حَدَّثَنَا جَعْفَرُ بْنُ سُلَيْمَانَ الضُّبَعِيُّ عَنْ أَبِي عِمْرَانَ الْجَوْنِيِّ عَنْ أَبِي بَكْرِ بْنِ أَبِي مُوسَى الْأَشْعَرِيِّ قَال سَمِعْتُ أَبِي بِحَضْرَةِ الْعَدُوِّ يَقُولُ قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ إِنَّ أَبْوَابَ الْجَنَّةِ تَحْتَ ظِلَالِ السُّيُوفِ ... قَالَ أَبُو عِيسَى هَذَا حَدِيثٌ حَسَنٌ غَرِيبٌ

Qutaybah informed us from Ja'far ibn Sulaymaan ad-Duba'ee informed us from Aboo 'Imraan al-Jawnee from Abee Bakr ibn Abee Moosaa al-Ash'aree who said: I heard my father saying when we faced the enemy: The Prophet (ﷺ) said: "Indeed paradise is under the shade of the swords." … Aboo 'Eesaa [at-Tirmithee] said: This is a hadeeth hasan ghareeb.[13]

This hadeeth is rated hasan because Ja'far ibn Sulaymaan was graded sadooq (less accurate but upright) while the other narrators were all graded thiqah (reliable).[14] The ruling on a hadeeth is always according to the weakest link in its chain of narrators. It is a hadeeth hasan li thaatih.

However, due the existence of 3 narrations of this text in Saheeh al-Bukhaaree and 2 narrations in Saheeh Muslim it is reclassified as Saheeh li Ghayrih. The following hadeeth is one of the corroborating narrations in Saheeh al-Bukhaaree:

حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ مُحَمَّدٍ حَدَّثَنَا مُعَاوِيَةُ بْنُ عَمْرٍو حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو إِسْحَاقَ عَنْ مُوسَى بْنِ عُقْبَةَ عَنْ سَالِمٍ أَبِي النَّضْرِ مَوْلَى عُمَرَ بْنِ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ وَكَانَ كَاتِبَهُ قَالَ كَتَبَ إِلَيْهِ عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ أَبِي أَوْفَى رَضِيَ اللَّهُ عَنْهُمَا أَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ: ((وَاعْلَمُوا أَنَّ الْجَنَّةَ تَحْتَ ظِلَالِ السُّيُوفِ)).

'Abdullaah ibn Muhammad informed us that Mu'aawiyah ibn 'Amr informed them from Aboo Is'haaq from Moosaa ibn 'Uqbah from Saalim ibn an-Nadr, the freed slave and scribe of 'Umar ibn 'Ubaydillaah, who said that 'Abdullaah ibn

[14] The Science of Authenticating the Prophet's Traditions, p. 49.

Abee Awfaa wrote to him saying that the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) said: "Know that Paradise is under the shade of the swords."[15]

Grades

As in the case of the hadeeth saheeh where certain chains were considered the strongest, the following two chains were considered the strongest among the hasan hadeeths:

- Bahz ibn Hakeem from his father from his grandfather.
- 'Amr ibn Shu'ayb from his father from his grandfather.

Hadeeths in which there are disputes as to whether they are to be considered hasan or da'eef are rated lower, like the narrations of Haarith ibn 'Abdillaah, 'Aasim ibn Damrah, Hajjaaj ibn Aratt, etc.[16]

Terminology

When hadeeth scholars use the phrase صَحِيحُ الْإِسْنَادِ Saheehul-Isnaad (an authentic chain of narration) to describe a hadeeth, they are making a subtle indication that it is below the category of hadeeth saheeh. That is, it is probably a hadeeth hasan. On the other hand, if they use the phrase حَسَنُ الْإِسْنَادِ Hasanul-Isnaad (a sound chain of narration) it means that the hadeeth is da'eef . The reason for such a classification is that a chain may be saheeh or hasan with respect to the first three conditions (1. 'Adl, 2. 'Ittisaal as-sanad, and 3. Dabt) yet it may contain hidden defects or contradict a superior text.

Imaam at-Tirmithee often described hadeeths in his Sunan using the ambiguous phrase حَسَنٌ صَحِيحٌ Hasan Saheeh (sound authentic). Ibn Hajar and followed by as-Suyootee explained it as referring to either:

- A hadeeth which has two or more chains in which one chain may be hasan while others may be saheeh. In other words, it is actually saheeh lighayrih.

[15] Sahih Al-Bukhari, Kitaab al-Jihaad, Baab al-Jannah Taht as-Suyoof, and Sahih Muslim, Baab Kiraahiyyah tamannee liqaa al-'aduww

[16] The Science of Authenticating the Prophet's Traditions, pp. 49-50.

- A hadeeth with only one chain about which some scholars have graded it saheeh while others have graded it hasan and Imaam at-Tirmithee was reluctant to give preference to one opinion over the other.

Imaam al-Baghawee in his work, Masaabeeh as-Sunnah, classified hadeeths found in Saheeh al-Bukhaaree and Saheeh Muslim as saheeh, while those found in the Sunan he classified as hasan. However, the scholars of hadeeth rejected his classification because the hadeeths found in the Sunan are a mixture of saheeh (authentic), hasan (sound), da'eef (weak), and mawdoo' (fabricated).

Texts

There are no texts in which hasan hadeeths have been specifically compiled. However, hadeeths of that grade can be found in all of the Sunans. In the case of Sunan Abee Daawood, the author expressed that the saheeh and da'eef and those narrations that resemble them are clearly identified. Those without any reference at all were hasan in his estimation.[17]

Hadeeth Hasan li Ghayrih

If one or more of the narrators belonged to a lower grade (i.e. grades 5 or 6 rendering the hadeeth da'eef), that is, its weakness is due to poor memory of a narrator or narrators and not due to indecent behaviour or lies, and there are other hadeeths supporting it in form or sense, it would be reclassified as hasan li ghayrih.

It should again be noted that the overall acceptability of an isnaad is based on its weakest link. Consequently, if all of the narrators were highly reliable (thiqah) and one, anywhere in the chain was classified as a liar (kaththaab), the hadeeth would be classified as fabricated, even if proved authentic by other isnaads.

The following is an example of a hasan li ghayrih hadeeth found in Sunan at-Tirmithee:

حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ بَشَّارٍ حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ سَعِيدٍ وَعَبْدُ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنُ مَهْدِيٍّ وَمُحَمَّدُ بْنُ جَعْفَرٍ قَالُوا حَدَّثَنَا شُعْبَةُ عَنْ عَاصِمِ بْنِ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ قَال سَمِعْتُ عَبْدَ اللَّهِ بْنَ عَامِرِ بْنِ رَبِيعَةَ عَنْ أَبِيهِ أَنَّ امْرَأَةً مِنْ بَنِي فَزَارَةَ تَزَوَّجَتْ عَلَى نَعْلَيْنِ فَقَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ أَرَضِيتِ مِنْ نَفْسِكِ وَمَالِكِ بِنَعْلَيْنِ قَالَتْ نَعَمْ قَالَ فَأَجَازَهُ

[17] The Science of Authenticating the Prophet's Traditions, pp. 50-3.

Muhammad ibn Bashshaar informed us that Yahyaa ibn Sa‘eed and ‘Abdur-Rahmaan ibn Mahdee and Muhammad ibn Ja‘far all said: Shu‘bah informed us from ‘Aasim ibn ‘Ubaydillaah who said that he heard ‘Abdullaah ibn ‘Aamir ibn Rabee‘ah from his father that a lady from the Fazaarah tribe was married based on [a dowry of] a pair of sandals. The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) asked: “Are you pleased to [turn over your] self and your wealth for a pair of sandals?” She replied: Yes. So he permitted it.[18]

‘Aasim ibn ‘Ubaydillaah is classified as da‘eef by Yahyaa ibn Mu‘een and Ahmad ibn Hambal and munkar by al-Bukhaaree. However, Imaam at-Tirmithee added: [There are other narrations] on this topic from ‘Umar, Aboo Hurayrah, Sahl ibn Sa‘d, Aboo Sa‘eed, Anas, ‘Aa’ishah, Jaabir, Aboo Hadrad al-Aslamee. [Thus] ‘Aamir ibn Rabee‘ah’s narration is hasan saheeh.

Ruling on the Hadeeth Hasan

The hadeeth hasan is valid for establishing Islaamic rulings that should not be rejected unless abrogated or superceded by a hadeeth saheeh. In this respect, it is no different from a hadeeth saheeh. The both represent valid instructions authentically transmitted from the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) who must be obeyed when he instructs and whose recommendations are better taken when he advises.

Hadeeth Da‘eef

Linguistically, da‘eef means “weak”, while technically it refers to a narration below the standard of hasan. This is a hadeeth in which any one or more of the five conditions of Sihhah have not been met. Al-Bayqoonee defined the hadeeth hasan in his poetry on ‘Uloom al-Hadeeth in a similar way:

وَكُلُّ مَا عَنْ رُتْبَةِ الْحَسَنِ قَصُر * فَهُوَ الضَّعِيفُ وَهُوَ أَقْسَامٌ كَثُر

Whatever is short of the level of hasan * It is da‘eef and it has numerous branches.

A sample of a da‘eef narration can be found in the following narration collected by at-Tirmithee:

حَدَّثَنَا بُنْدَارٌ حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ سَعِيدٍ وَعَبْدُ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنُ مَهْدِيٍّ وَبَهْزُ بْنُ أَسَدٍ قَالُوا حَدَّثَنَا حَمَادُ بْنُ سَلَمَةِ عَنْ حَكِيمٍ الْأَثْرَمِ عَنْ أَبِي تَمِيمَةَ الهُجَيْمِيِّ عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ

Aboo 'Eesaa said: We do not know this hadeeth except from the narration of Hakeem al-Athram from Aboo Tameemah al-Hujaymee from Aboo Hurayrah.[19] Hakeem al-Athram was graded weak by the scholars and Ibn Hajar labeled him layyin in Taqreeb at-Tah'theeb.[20]

Grades of Da'eef

The weakness of a hadeeth will vary according the severity of the weakness due to breaks in the chain or defects in the narrators. As to the weakest chain, it would be the fabricated narrations. Al-Haakim commented in his work, Ma'rifah 'Uloom al-Hadeeth, about the weakest narrations attributed to certain Companions, regions and countries. For example, he stated that the weakest narration linked to Aboo Bakr as-Siddeeq was that of Ibn Moosaa ad-Daqeeqee from Farqad as-Subkhee from Murrahat-Tayyib from Aboo Bakr. He further stated that the weakest chain linked to the people of Syria was that of Muhammad ibn Qays al-Masloob from 'Ubaydullaah ibn Zahrah from 'Alee ibn Yazeed form Qaasim from Aboo Umaamah.

[19] Sunan at-Tirmithee.

[20] However, there are other narrations of this hadeeth which are authentic. For example:

عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ قَالَ قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ ﷺ : ((مَنْ أَتَى حَائِضًا أَوْ امْرَأَةً فِي دُبُرِهَا أَوْ كَاهِنًا فَصَدَّقَهُ بِمَا يَقُولُ فَقَدْ كَفَرَ بِمَا أُنْزِلَ عَلَى مُحَمَّدٍ)) .

Aboo Hurayrah stated that the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) said: "Whoever cohabits with a menstruating woman, enters a woman from her anus, or goes to a fortune-teller and believed what he said, has disbelieved in what was revealed to Muhammad." (Saheeh Sunan Ibn Maajah, vol. 1, p. 198, no. 644 and Sunan Abu Dawud, vol. 3, p. 923, no. 3245). Note that "disbelief" mentioned in this hadeeth refers to an "act of disbelief" and not "disbelief of the heart" which expels the doer from Islaam.

Ruling on Da'eef Narrations

Scholars differed regarding the use of hadeeth da'eef. The majority permitted its application for meritorious deeds not pertaining to theology or legal rulings (halaal and haraam) according to three conditions specified by Ibn Hajar.

1. The hadeeth must not be excessively weak, containing liars or fabricators.
2. It must be acknowledged as reliable evidence.
3. One does not suppose that by its application its strength is established.[21]

Sufyaan ath-Thawree, 'Abdur-Rahmaan ibn Mahdee and Ahmad ibn Hambal used weak narrations. In fact Imaam Ahmad preferred to use weak narrations to Qiyaas.

The hadeeth da'eef is also referred to in classical works as al-Khabar al-Mardood (Rejected Narrations). The inauthentic hadeeth is one in which the truth of the report is highly unlikely due to the loss of one or more of the conditions for the acceptance. Some da'eef hadeeths may be reclassified due to supportive factors while others are totally rejected. The inauthentic hadeeth may be further subdivided into different subcategories based on which of the five criteria has not been met.

Causes of Rejection:

The factors which cause a hadeeth to be rejected all fall under two main headings: 1. A break in the chain of narration or 2. A defect in the narrator himself

I. BREAKS IN THE CHAIN OF NARRATION

The breaks in the chain of narration can be classified according to appearance into two categories: Obvious breaks and Hidden breaks.

A. Obvious breaks refers to those isnaads in which a narrator did not come in contact with his teacher due either to the difference in generations, making it impossible for them to meet,[22] or due to him not ever meeting with the teacher according to records. Because of that the researcher in the area of narrators needs to know the biographies of the narrators themselves since they contain the dates of birth and death, time period in which they studied, their journeys etc. Hadeeth scholars have coined four names for these

[21] The Science of Authenticating The Prophet's Traditions, p. 69.

[22] I.e. The teacher died before the student was born or when the student was below five years of age.

categories according to the place where the break occurs or the number of narrators deleted: (i) Mu'allaq, (ii) Mursal, (iii) Mu'dal and (iv) Munqati'.

B. Hidden breaks refers to isnaads in which a narrator is deleted or hidden in a subtle fashion not readily visible from a study of the individual biographies. This category has two main forms: (1) Mudallas and (2) Mursal Khafee.

A. Obvious Breaks

i. Mu'allaq (hanging)

This term derived from the verb عَلَّقَ 'allaqa (to suspend; to hang) is used because only the upper part of the chain remains giving it an appearance of dangling. Technically it means a hadeeth in which the beginning of its chain of narration has one or more consecutive narrators deleted. E.g. Al-Bukhaaree recorded the following in the beginning of his Chapter Concerning Thighs:

وَقَالَ أَبُو مُوسَى غَطَّى النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ رُكْبَتَيْهِ حِينَ دَخَلَ عُثْمَانُ

> Aboo Moosaa said, "The Prophet (ﷺ) covered his thighs when 'Uthmaan entered."[23]

This hadeeth is classified as Mu'allaq because al-Bukhaaree deleted all of its chain of narrators except the Companion Aboo Moosaa al-Ash'aree.

In his chapter on "The Obligation of Salaah in Clothes", Imaam al-Bukhaaree states:

وَأَمَرَ النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ أَنْ لَا يَطُوفَ بِالْبَيْتِ عُرْيَانٌ

> "And the Prophet (ﷺ) instructed that no naked person should walk around the Ka'bah."[24]

بَاب مَا يُذْكَرُ فِي الْفَخِذ قَالَ أَبُو عَبْد اللَّهِ وَيُرْوَى عَنْ ابْنِ عَبَّاسٍ وَجَرْهَد وَمُحَمَّد بْنِ جَحْشٍ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ الْفَخِذُ عَوْرَةٌ وَقَالَ أَنَسُ بْنُ مَالِكٍ حَسَرَ النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَنْ فَخِذِه قَالَ أَبُو عَبْد اللَّهِ وَحَدِيثُ أَنَسٍ أَسْنَدُ وَحَدِيثُ جَرْهَد أَحْوَطُ حَتَّى يُخْرَجَ مِنْ اخْتِلَافِهِمْ وَقَالَ أَبُو مُوسَى غَطَّى النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ رُكْبَتَيْهِ حِينَ دَخَلَ عُثْمَانُ وَقَالَ زَيْدُ بْنُ ثَابِتٍ أَنْزَلَ اللَّهُ عَلَى رَسُولِهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ وَفَخِذُهُ عَلَى فَخِذِي فَثَقُلَتْ عَلَيَّ حَتَّى خِفْتُ أَنْ تَرُضَّ فَخِذِي

In this narration, he deleted the complete chain, including the Companion, up to the Prophet (ﷺ).

The mu'allaq narration may be a hadeeth from the Prophet (ﷺ) as in the previously mentioned examples, or it could be the statement or deed of a Companion or a Successor. For example, al-Bukhaaree related in his Chapter on Salaah on Rooftops, Pulpits and Wood:

وَصَلَّى أَبُو هُرَيْرَةَ عَلَى سَقْفِ الْمَسْجِدِ بِصَلَاةِ الْإِمَامِ وَصَلَّى ابْنُ عُمَرَ عَلَى الثَّلْجِ

Aboo Hurayrah prayed on the roof of the mosque following the prayer of the imaam and Ibn 'Umar prayed on snow.[25] This description of Aboo Hurayrah's practice is mentioned by al-Bukhaaree without a chain of narration.

And in the Chapter on Tayammum, under the heading "Clean Earth", he narrated the following:

وَقَالَ الْحَسَنُ يُجْزِئُهُ التَّيَمُّمُ مَا لَمْ يُحْدِثْ

Al-Hasan said: "Tayammum is sufficient as long as he doesn't break his state of purity."[26] Al-Hasan here is al-Hasan ibn al-Hasan ibn Yasaar al-Basree (d. 110AH), from the medial level of the Successors.

Mu'allaq hadeeths are generally automatically classified da'eef and rejected because one of the conditions of authenticity is missing, except if they are mentioned in hadeeth collections in which the authors spent great efforts to only include saheeh hadeeths (e.g. Saheeh al-Bukhaaree and Saheeh Muslim). Such narrations were used only as headings or supportive evidence which they considered weak and did not constitute the main proof for Islamic principles. Furthermore, in most cases later hadeeth scholars have tracked down the majority of these narrations with complete chains in other hadeeth compilations. E.g. The hadeeth of Aboo 'Aamir from the Prophet (ﷺ) that,

((لَيَكُونَنَّ مِنْ أُمَّتِي أَقْوَامٌ يَسْتَحِلُّونَ الْحِرَ وَالْحَرِيرَ وَالْخَمْرَ وَالْمَعَازِفَ وَلَيَنْزِلَنَّ أَقْوَامٌ إِلَى جَنْبِ عَلَمٍ يَرُوحُ عَلَيْهِمْ بِسَارِحَةٍ لَهُمْ يَأْتِيهِمْ يَعْنِي الْفَقِيرَ لِحَاجَةٍ فَيَقُولُونَ ارْجِعْ إِلَيْنَا غَدًا فَيُبَيِّتُهُمْ اللَّهُ وَيَضَعُ الْعَلَمَ وَيَمْسَخُ آخَرِينَ قِرَدَةً وَخَنَازِيرَ إِلَى يَوْمِ الْقِيَامَةِ))

The mu'allaq narrations in Saheeh al-Bukhaaree are many. However, the great hadeeth scholar, Ibn Hajar, wrote a book dedicated to tracking down all the mu'allaq narrations of Saheeh al-Bukhaaree that he called Taghleeq at-Ta'leeq (Closing Tightly the Hanging Narrations). On the other hand, the mu'allaq narrations in Saheeh Muslim are very few. There are only six mu'allaq narrations from the Prophet (ﷺ) of which Imaam Muslim himself mentioned five of them with complete chains elsewhere in his compilation. The remaining narration, number 369, was found by others.

Ruling on Mu'allaq Narrations of al-Bukhaaree and Muslim

Such hadeeths are generally considered authentic if the hadeeth is narrated using verbs in the active voice, like رَوَى rawaa (he narrated); قال qaala (he said); ذَكَرَ thakara (he mentioned). On the other hand, if they are narrated using the passive voice, like رُوِيَ ruwiya (it was narrated); قيل qeela (it was said); ذُكِرَ thukira (it was mentioned), their status is uncertain. Some of them may be saheeh, others hasan and yet others da'eef. However, the weak narrations are not excessively weak due to their presence in these books in which the authors sought to compile only authentic hadeeths.

It should be noted, however, that those hadeeths narrated in the passive voice due to weakness may have authentic chains which al-Bukhaaree did not come across. For example, in the beginning of his Chapter Concerning Thighs mentioned earlier, Imaam al-Bukhaaree stated:

وَيُرْوَى عَنْ ابْنِ عَبَّاسٍ وَجَرْهَدٍ وَمُحَمَّدِ بْنِ جَحْشٍ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ الْفَخِذُ عَوْرَةٌ وَقَالَ أَنَسُ بْنُ مَالِكٍ حَسَرَ النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَنْ فَخِذِهِ قَالَ أَبُو عَبْد اللَّهِ وَحَدِيثُ أَنَسٍ أَسْنَدُ وَحَدِيثُ جَرْهَدٍ أَحْوَطُ حَتَّى يُخْرَجَ مِنْ اخْتِلَافِهِمْ

"And it has been narrated from Ibn 'Abbaas, Jarhad and Muhammad ibn Jahsh from the Prophet (ﷺ): 'The thigh is [from the] private parts.' Anas ibn Maalik said: The Prophet (ﷺ) uncovered his thigh. Aboo 'Abdillaah [al-Bukhaaree] said: Anas' hadeeth has a better chain and that of Jarhad is more precautionary in order to escape their contradiction." The passive voice was used for Jarhad and active for Anas. However, there are 4 complete narrations of Jarhad's quotation in Sunan at-Tirmithee, one in Sunan Abee Daawood,[29] 8 in Musnad Ahmad, and 2 in Sunan ad-Daarimee.

Mu'allaq narrations in other collections are generally considered da'eef regardless of how they are mentioned by the authors, active or passive voice.

ii. Mursal (generalized)

The adjective mursal comes from the verb أَرْسَلَ arsala (to set free; to let loose; to send). This term is used because the narrator has generalized in freely quoting the chain of narrator's by omitting a narrator. Technically a mursal narration is a hadeeth in which the last narrator (i.e. Sahaabee) has been deleted.

Al-Bayqoonee defined the hadeeth hasan in his poetry on 'Uloom al-Hadeeth in a similar way:

وَمُرْسَلٌ مِنْهُ الصَّحَابِيُّ سَقَط * وَقُلْ غَرِيبٌ مَا رَوَى رَاوٍ فَقَط

And mursal is that from which the Companion has fallen * And say: ghareeb is what a only single narrator has narrated.

An example of such a hadeeth can be found in the following narration from Saheeh Muslim in the Chapter on Business Transactions:

و حَدَّثَنِي مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ رَافِعٍ حَدَّثَنَا حُجَيْنُ بْنُ الْمُثَنَّى حَدَّثَنَا اللَّيْثُ عَنْ عُقَيْلٍ عَنْ ابْنِ شِهَابٍ عَنْ سَعِيدِ بْنِ الْمُسَيَّبِ أَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ نَهَى عَنْ بَيْعِ الْمُزَابَنَةِ وَالْمُحَاقَلَةِ وَالْمُزَابَنَةُ أَنْ يُبَاعَ ثَمَرُ النَّخْلِ بِالتَّمْرِ وَالْمُحَاقَلَةُ أَنْ يُبَاعَ الزَّرْعُ بِالْقَمْحِ وَاسْتِكْرَاءُ الْأَرْضِ بِالْقَمْحِ

Muhammad ibn Raafi' told me that Hujayn ibn al-Muthannaa told them that al-Layth reported from 'Aqeel from Ibn Shihaab from Sa'eed ibn al-Musayyab that Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) forbade al-Muzaabanah and al-Muhaaqalah. Al-Muzaabanah means that fresh dates on the tree are sold for dry dates and al-Muhaaqalah means that wheat in the ear is sold for ground wheat and renting farmland for wheat."[30]

Sa'eed, who was a Taabi'ee, has reported this hadeeth without mentioning the link between himself and the Prophet (ﷺ). That link could have been a sahaabee or it could also have been another Taabi'ee like himself who was reporting it from a sahaabee.

[30] Sahih Muslim, vol. 3, p. 807, no. 3678.

The jurists (fuqahaa) generally defined the mursal as any omission in the chain, wherever it may occur and al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee agreed with them.[31]

The Ruling on Mursal Hadeeth

Such a hadeeth is in essence da'eef and thus rejected due to the loss of the condition of ittisaal (continuity) and the lack of knowledge about the missing narrator who may have been a sahaabee or another Taabi'ee. This basic ruling stands regardless of whether the chain of narrators up to the Successor is authentic or not. If the chain up to the Successor is authentic it is referred to as mursal saheeh or saheeh mursal. For example, Aboo Daawood collected the following narration in his collection of mursal narrations:

حَدَّثَنَا سُلَيْمَانُ بْنُ دَاودَ حَدَّثَنَا ابْنُ وَهْبٍ أَخْبَرَنَا حَيْوَةُ بْنُ شُرَيحٍ عَنْ سَالِمٍ بْنِ غَيْلَانَ عَنْ يَزِيدٍ بْنِ أَبِي حَبِيبٍ أَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ مَرَّ عَلَى امْرَأَتَيْنِ تُصَلِّيَانِ فَقَالَ: ((إِذَا سَجَدْتُمَا فَضُمَّا بَعْضَ اللَّحْمِ إِلَى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَإِنَّ الْمَرْأَةَ لَيْسَتْ فِي ذَلِكَ كَالرِّجَالِ))

Sulaymaan ibn Daawood informed us [saying] Ibn Wahb informed us [saying] Haywah ibn Shurayh informed us from Saalim ibn Ghaylaan from Yazeed ibn Habeeb that the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) passed by two women who were praying and said: "Whenever you prostrate, huddle some of your flesh towards the ground for the woman is not like the man it that respect."[32]

All of the narrators are reliable, however it is mursal because Yazeed ibn Abee Habeeb was a minor Successor. Consequently, it is saheeh al-Isnaad mursal but da'eef and thus cannot be used as independent legal evidence.[33]

Scholars of hadeeth and others differed regarding the use of mursal narrations as textual evidence because this type of omission differs from others. The positions of the scholars regarding mursal narrations are summarized in the following three categories:

a) The Mursal is weak and rejected. The majority of hadeeth scholars rejected the mursal narration arguing that the omitted narrator is not necessarily a Companion due to a lack of information about exactly who the omitted narrator was.

31 The Science of Authenticating the Prophets Traditions, pp. 75-6.

32 Al-Maraaseel, no. 87.

33 Duroos fee Mustalah al-Hadeeth, p. 18.

b) The Mursal is valid and accepted. The leading Imaams, Aboo Haneefah, Maalik and Ahmad and others argued that the mursal narration was valid as evidence on condition (1) that the Successor who narrated it was himself reliable, and (2) that he was known to normally narrate from reliable sources as well. They argued that it is inconceivable that a reliable Successor say: 'The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) said,' if they did not receive it from someone reliable.

c) The Mursal may be conditionally accepted. Imaam ash-Shaafi'ee and other scholars accepted the mursal narration if four conditions were fulfilled; three of which relate to the narrators and one to the text of the hadeeth itself: (1) that the Successor was from among the major or senior Successors[34]; (2) that the Successor be graded as reliable (thiqah); (3) that reliable scholars did not dispute its validity; and (4) that the previous three conditions be reinforced by either another continuous narration, another mursal with a different chain, statements of the Companions to the same effect, or its use in the fatwaas of leading jurists. In the case of point four above, both narrations would be considered authentic and would be preferred to other authentic narrations with only single chains of narration where there are irreconcilable differences.[35]

Exceptional Mursal

There is one category of mursal that is an exception from the general grading of da'eef. If the Successor narrates something he heard or saw the Prophet (ﷺ) do while he was a disbeliever and the Prophet (ﷺ) died before his conversion,[36] his narration is considered continuous and authentic though externally appearing as a mursal narration.

For example the narration of at-Tanookhee, Heraclius' emmisary, who had been sent to the Prophet (ﷺ) to ask him certain questions and the narration of [34] The Successors (taabi'oon) were traditionally divided into four levels; 1. Major Taabi'oon like Sa'eed ibn al-Musayyab and others who met and studied under many Companions from the beginning of the era of the Companions. 2. Medial Taabi'oon like al-Hasan al-Basree and Ibn Seereen who met some Companions and narrated from them. 3. Lower Median Taabi'oon like az-Zuhree and Qataadah who mostly narrated from Major Taabi'oon and not the Companions. 4. Minor Taabi'oon like al-A'mash and Aboo Haneefah who only met one or two Companions and was not known to have narrated anything from them.

[35] The Science of Authenticating the Prophets Traditions, pp. 77-8.

[36] A Sahaabee is defined as one who met the Prophet (ﷺ) as a believer and died a believer

Caesar's emissary collected by Ahmad and Aboo Ya'laa in their musnads[37] and recorded as hadeeths with continuous chains of narration.[38]

Mursal as-Sahaabah

If a Sahaabee narrates a saying or action of the Prophet (ﷺ) which he could not have heard or seen due to either his age, late entrance into Islaam or his absence at the time of the event, such a narration is classified as mursal as-sahaabah. There are many such hadeeths narrated by young Sahaabah like Ibn 'Abbaas, Ibn az-Zubayr and others. An example of that can be found in 'Aa'ishah's narration in Saheeh al-Bukhaaree in the Chapter on the Beginning of Revelation in which she describes how revelation to the Prophet (ﷺ) began in the Cave of Hiraa, Khadeejah's response, the story of Waraqah ibn Nawfal, etc. 'Aa'ishah was not present on those occasions. Consequently, she either learned about them from the Prophet (ﷺ) himself, or from other Companions. It is highly unlikely that she learned about them from any of the Successors.

The Ruling on Mursal as-Sahaabah

The majority of scholars regard it as a Hadeeth Saheeh because narrations of the sahaabah from taabi'oon are extremely rare and if they did so they used to indicate it. If they did not say anything it is assumed that it must have been from another sahaabee. Since the sahaabah are all considered 'adool (reliable) this generalization does not affect the reliability of the hadeeth.

Literature: Some books have been written on mursal narrations like al-Maraaseel by Aboo Daawood, al-Maraaseel by Ibn Abee Haatim and Jaami'ah at-Tahseel li Ahkaam al-Maraaseel by 'Allaa'ee.

iii. Munqati' (broken)

The label is derived from the verb انْقَطَعَ inqata'a (to be broken). Technically it refers to a hadeeth in which one or more narrators have been deleted at random from the middle of the chain of narrators. Imaam an-Nawawee stated that most hadeeth scholars defined it as a break between the Successors and the Companion. Ibn Hajar preferred this definition and added that the break could occur at more than one place in the chain.[39] An example of this category can be found in the following narration from Ibn Abee Haatim's collection:

رَوَى عَبْدُ الرَّزَّاقِ عَنِ الثَّوْرِيِّ عَنْ أَبِي إِسْحَاقَ عَنْ زَيْدِ بْنِ يُثَيْعٍ عَنْ حُذَيفَةَ عَنِ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ: ((إِنْ وَلَّيْتُمُوهَا أَبَا بَكْرٍ فَقَوِيٌّ أَمِينٌ))

'Abdur-Razzaaq narrated from ath-Thawree from Aboo Is'haaq from Zayd ibn Yuthay' from the Prophet (ﷺ) that he said, "It would be good if you made Aboo Bakr your leader (Waali) for he is strong and trustworthy."[40]

The narrator Shurayk has been deleted from the middle of the chain between ath-Thawree and Aboo Is'haaq because ath-Thawree did not hear any narrations from Aboo Is'haaq directly, but used to hear them through Shurayk who studied under Aboo Is'haaq.

iv. Mu'dal (double break)

Linguistically, mu'dal is derived from عَضَلَ 'adala which means "to be perplexed". Technically it refers to a hadeeth in which two or more consecutive narrators are deleted in the middle or the end of the chain. If two or more narrators are deleted from the beginning its called mu'allaq. E.g. Al-Haakim mentions in his book Ma'rifah 'Uloom al-Hadeeth that al-Qa'nabee[41] reported from Maalik, that a report reached him that Aboo Hurayrah said that Allaah's messenger said, ((لِلْمَمْلُوكِ طَعَامُهُ وَكِسْوَتُهُ، وَلاَ يُكَلَّفُ مِنَ الْعَمَلِ إِلاَّ مَا يُطِيقُ))

> "The mamlook (slave) should be given food and clothing according to normal standards and not be burdened with work beyond his ability."

This hadeeth is classified as mu'dal because Imaam Maalik has deleted two or three narrators between himself and Aboo Hurayrah. We know two were deleted because the same hadeeth has been collected in other collections besides al-

Muwatta[42] with the following chain: Maalik reported from Muhammad ibn ‘Ajlaan from his father[43] from Aboo Hurayrah.[44]

The mu‘dal and mu‘allaq are identical when the narrators are omitted in consecutively at the beginning of the chain of narrators and different when two are missing from the middle (i.e., mu‘dal), or one is missing from the beginning (i.e., mu‘allaq).

Scholars of hadeeth unanimously considered the mu‘dal as weaker and more defective than the mursal and the munqati‘ due to excessive omissions in its chain.

B. Hidden Breaks

i. Mudallas (Counterfeit)

The word Mudallas comes from the verb دَلَّسَ dallasa which literally means to hide the defects in goods from a buyer. Technically it refers to the hiding of a defect in the sanad and the beautification of its outer appearance. It may be further subdivided into two other groups: [a] Tadlees as-Sanad and [b] Tadlees ash-Shuyookh.

a) Tadlees As-Sanad

This form of Tadlees has two manifestations:

(1) The first is the case where a narrator, narrates something which he did not hear from someone whom he studied under in an ambiguous fashion. He does not openly claim to have heard it from his teacher but only implies it by using the phrase “ قَالَ He said” or “ عَنْ from”. E.g. ‘Alee ibn Khashram said that Ibn ‘Uyaynah related to us from az-Zuhree but when he was asked “Did you hear it from az-Zuhree?” he replied, “ ‘Abdur-Razzaaq informed me from Mu‘ammar from az-Zuhree.” In this example Ibn ‘Uyaynah had deleted two narrators between himself and az-Zuhree.

حَدَّثَنَا عُبَيْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ سَعْدٍ حَدَّثَنَا عَمِّي حَدَّثَنَا أَبِي عَنْ ابْنِ إِسْحَقَ عَنْ مُحَمَّدِ بْنِ عَمْرِو بْنِ عَطَاءٍ عَنْ ذَكْوَانَ مَوْلَى عَائِشَةَ أَنَّهَا حَدَّثَتْهُ أَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ كَانَ يُصَلِّي بَعْدَ الْعَصْرِ وَيَنْهَى عَنْهَا وَيُوَاصِلُ وَيَنْهَى عَنْ الْوِصَالِ

‘Ubaydullaah ibn Sa‘d informed us [saying], my uncle informed us [saying], my father informed us from Ibn Is’haaq from Muhammad ibn ‘Amr ibn ‘Ataa from Thakwaan, the freed slave of ‘Aa’ishah, that she informed him that the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) used to pray after ‘Asr prayers and forbid it, and he used to fast for twenty-four hours and forbid continual fasting.[45]

The narrators of this hadeeth are reliable. However, Ibn Is’haaq, whose name was Muhammad ibn Is’haaq ibn Yasaar, was a known mudallis and he narrated this hadeeth from Muhammad ibn ‘Amr using the phrase عَنْ ‘an (from) without clearly indicating that he actually heard it from him.

(2) The other form is where a Raawee narrates from his teacher deleting from the chain a weak narrator between two strong narrators who met each other by using ambiguous terminology. E.g. Aboo Haatim collected the following hadeeth in which his father said Is’haaq ibn Raahawayh reported from Baqiyyah who said that Aboo Wahb al-Asadee informed him from Naafi‘ from Ibn‘Umar the hadeeth, ((لاَ تَحْمَدُوا إِسْلاَمَ الْمَرْءِ حَتَّى تَعْرِفُوا عُقْدَةَ رَأْيِهِ))

“Don’t praise a man’s Islaam until you know what his opinions are.”

Aboo Haatim’s father said, “This hadeeth has in it a point which few people realize, ‘Ubaydullaah ibn ‘Amr narrated this hadeeth from Is’haaq ibn Farwah from Naafi‘ from Ibn ‘Umar from the Prophet (ﷺ) because ‘Ubaydullaah ibn

Saqiyah called him Aboo Wahb al-Asasi so he would not be spotted when he dropped Is'haaq ibn Abee Farwah. 'Ubaydullaah was considered thiqah (reliable narrator), Is'haaq ibn Farwah was weak and Naafi' was strong.

This form of tadlees is also called Tadlees at-Taswiyah and is the worst from of tadlees. Scholars like al-'Iraaqee declared, "Any scholar who does Tadlees at-Taswiyah will be dismissed as weak." Among those noted for this practise was al-Waleed ibn Muslim. The most infamous practitioner of this act was Baqiyyah ibn al-Waleed.

b) Tadlees Ash-Shuyookh

This is the case in which a narrator relates a hadeeth from one of his teachers (shuyookh) but refers to him by an unknown name, nick name or characteristic. An example of this type of tadlees is Aboo Bakr ibn Mujaahid's[46] statement, " 'Abdullaah ibn 'Abdillaah informed us," in which he is referring to the hadeeth scholar, Aboo Bakr ibn Daawood as-Sajistaanee.

This form of tadlees was less detested since no omission took place in the chain as a result of it. It was disliked because the distortion of the narrator's identity complicated tracing his grading, and the overall grading of the hadeeth.

Reasons for Tadlees

1. Narrators obscured the chains in order to have apparently stronger narrations due to fewer narrators or to hide missed opportunities of receiving hadeeths directly from a prominent shaykh.

2. The identities of narrators were distorted to hide weak narrators, or to give the impression that one had many teachers.

Ruling Concerning the Mudalliseen

It is obvious from the conditions of those who practised tadlees and the statements of the scholars regarding them that they were of different levels. Some were known to do so rarely, like Sufyaan ath-Thawree, Ibn 'Uyaynah, al-A'mash, and others. Though they were described as mudalliseen, the label does not degrade their narrations, because rulings are not based on minute errors, but on what is most common. Others were accused of tadlees by some scholars, however it was not proven and the leading scholars of this field did not describe them as such. For example, Habeeb ibn Abee Thaabit who was labelled by Ibn Hibbaan and Ibn Khuzaymah as a mudallis, but a large group of specialists, among them al-Bukhaaree, Ahmad, Ibn Ma'een, 'Alee ibn al-Madeenee, an-Nasaa'ee, Aboo Haatim ar-Raazee, Sufyaan ath-Thawree, classified him "reliable". Ibn Hajar mistakenly mentioned him in at-Taqreeb as being a frequent mudallis, but in the beginning of his compendium, Fat'hul-Baaree, he mentioned that Habeeb ibn Abee Thaabit was mis-labelled "weak" based on unacceptable matters. Furthermore, Imaam ath-Thahabee praised him and totally ignored the claims of tadlees.[47]

Some hadeeth scholars held that narrators who practiced any form of tadlees would be rejected as weak and untrustworthy. Others held that the narrations of the mudallis would be considered if openly declared that he heard the narration by using terms like سَمِعْتُ sami'tu (I heard), and they would be rejected if ambiguous terms like عَنْ 'an (from) were used. For example, ath-Thahabee stated that the majority of experts considered Baqiyyah ibn al-Waleed to be reliable (thiqah) in what he heard from reliable narrators. Another example is Ibn Jurayj's statement regarding himself that whatever he narrated from 'Ataa he heard. Thus, scholars would not accept any hadeeth in which Ibn Jurayj did not clearly state he heard it, except narrations from 'Ataa.

The Methods of Identifying Tadlees

(1) By the Mudallis reporting his act, if directly questioned as in the case of Ibn 'Uyaynah. For example, Imaam ath-Thahabee mentioned in his work, Meezaan al-I'tidaal, from Saalih who related from al-Haytham ibn Khaarijah that he said: I told al-Waleed ibn Muslim: "You have corrupted the hadeeths of al-Awzaa'ee." He asked: "How?" I said: "You narrate from al-Awzaa'ee from Naafi', from al-Awzaa'ee from az-Zuhree, and from al-Awzaa'ee from Yahyaa ibn Sa'eed, while others put 'Abdullaah ibn 'Aamir al-Aslamee between al-Awzaa'ee and Naafi', and Aboo al-Haytham between him and az-Zuhree. So what caused you to do that?" He replied: "Al-Awzaa'ee is greater than to narrate from the likes of them. So I said to myself, if al-Awzaa'ee narrated from these weak individuals rejected hadeeths and I deleted them and made al-Awzaa'ee's narration from reliable narrators, al-Awzaa'ee would appear weak and my statement would not be considered!"

(2) By a statement of one of the contemporary scholars to that effect. E.g. Al-

ii. Mursal Khafee (Hidden Generalization)

Technically means that someone narrates something he did not hear from someone whom he met or who was his contemporary using terminology implying that he heard it from him. The difference between Mursal Khafiy and Tadlees as-Sanad is that in the case of Mursal, he narrates from someone whom he did not study under whereas in Tadlees he narrates from his teacher. E.g.

حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الصَّبَّاحِ أَنْبَأَنَا عَبْدُ الْعَزِيزِ بْنُ مُحَمَّدٍ عَنْ صَالِحِ بْنِ مُحَمَّدِ بْنِ زَائِدَةَ عَنْ عُمَرَ بْنِ عَبْدِ الْعَزِيزِ عَنْ عُقْبَةَ بْنِ عَامِرٍ الْجُهَنِيِّ قَالَ قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ رَحِمَ اللَّهُ حَارِسَ الْحَرَسِ

Muhammad ibn as-Sabbaah informed us [saying:] 'Abdul-'Azeez ibn Muhammad informed us from Saalih ibn Muhammad ibn Zaa'id from 'Umar ibn 'Abdul-'Azeez from 'Uqbah ibn 'Aamir al-Juhanee who quoted the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) as saying, "May Allaah's mercy be on the watch guard who watched over the other watch guards."[48]

'Umar did not meet 'Uqbah though he lived in his time according to al-Mizzee in his book al-Atraaf.

The Methods of Recognition

This type of Irsaal may be identified by any one of the following three factors:

(1) The statement of one of the scholars that such and such a narrator never met the narrator from whom he was narrating or that he never heard anything from him.

(2) The narrator informing on himself by admitting that he never met or heard directly from the narrator from whom he narrated.

(3) If the hadeeth comes along another chain in which people are added between a narrator and the one from whom he was supposed to be narrating.

[48] Sunan Ibn Majah , Kitaab Jihaad Baab: Fadl al Haras wa takbeeer

Ruling on the Mursal Khafee

It is fundamentally a weak narration due to an obscured missing link. Once the omission is clearly identified the narration is considered munqati‘.

That concludes the six types of rejected narration due to breaks in the chain of narration. However, mu‘an‘an and mu’annan hadeeths could also be included.

iii. Mu‘an‘an and Mu’annan

The Mu‘an‘an is a hadeeth in which the narrator relates it using the preposition " عَنْ ‘an" meaning "from" without specifying that he was directly informed. The following is an example of a mu‘an‘an narration:

حَدَّثَنَا عُثْمَانُ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ حَدَّثَنَا مُعَاوِيَةُ بْنُ هِشَامٍ حَدَّثَنَا سُفْيَانُ عَنْ أُسَامَةَ بْنِ زَيْدٍ عَنْ عُثْمَانَ بْنِ عُرْوَةَ عَنْ عُرْوَةَ عَنْ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ إِنَّ اللَّهَ وَمَلَائِكَتَهُ يُصَلُّونَ عَلَى مَيَامِنِ الصُّفُوفِ

‘Uthmaan ibn Abee Shaybah informed us that Mu‘aawiyah ibn Hishaam informed him that Sufyaan informed him from Usaamah ibn Zayd from ‘Uthmaan ibn ‘Urwah from ‘Urwah from ‘Aa’ishah who said that Allaah’s Messenger said, "Indeed, Allaah and His angels pray for the right hand sides of the lines (in Salaah)."[49]

The Ruling on Mu‘an‘an *Hadeeth*s

According to the majority of hadeeth, Fiqh and Usool scholars, the Mu‘an‘an is considered muttasal (connected) if it fulfils the following two conditions:

(1) That the narrator who relates the chain in the ‘an‘an form not be a mudallis.

(2) That all the transmitters connected by ‘an (from) were contemporaries.

(3) Imaam al-Bukhaaree, ‘Alee ibn al-Madeenee and other eminent scholars added the third condition that meetings between the narrator and his teacher be conclusively established.

Other scholars considered such narrations as broken until proven otherwise.

The Mu'annan is a hadeeth in which the conjunction أَنَّ anna (that) is used throughout the sanad. The Mu'annan is classified in the same way as the mu'an'an.

II. DEFECTS IN THE NARRATOR

Defects in the transmitter are a result of 10 factors, five of which are connected to 'Adaalah (trust worthiness) and five to Dabt (accuracy).

A. The factors related to 'Adaalah are if a narrator is: 1. A liar; 2. Accused of lying; 3. Immoral; 4. An innovator in religious principles and 5. Obscure.

B. The factors related to Dabt are if a narrator is: 1. Excessive in his errors; 2. Weak of memory; 3. Negligent; 4. Known for a lot of misinterpretations and 5. Known to contradict reliable reporters.

The following are the rejected hadeeth due to the above-mentioned defects in the narrators starting with the most serious defects.

Mawdoo' (Fabricated)

If the defect in the narrator is that he is known to lie on the Prophet (ﷺ), his hadeeths are classified as Mawdoo'. Technically, a mawdoo' narration is not a hadeeth at all, but a lie attributed to The Prophet (ﷺ). It is referred to as a hadeeth figuratively.

Al-Bayqoonee defined it in his poetry as follows:

وَالْكَذِبُ الْمُخْتَلَقُ الْمَصْنُوعَةُ * عَلَى النَّبِيِّ فَذَلِكَ الْمَوْضُوعُ

And the invented fabricated lie * on the Prophet, that is the forgery

The Ruling Concerning Its Narration

It is the consensus of opinion of the scholar that it is not permissible to narrate such a "hadeeth" without pointing out that it is fabricated. This is based on the hadeeth collected by Muslim

((مَنْ حَدَّثَ عَنِّي بِحَدِيثٍ يُرَى أَنَّهُ كَذِبٌ فَهُوَ أَحَدُ الْكَاذِبِينَ))

"Whoever speaks about me what considers to be a lie is among the kaththaabeen (major liars)."[50]

Methods of Recognition

a. Confession of the fabricator himself as in the case of Aboo 'Ismah Nooh ibn Abee Maryam who confessed that he fabricated *hadeeth*s about the virtues of each soorah of Qur'aan and attributed them to Ibn 'Abbaas.

b. Indirect confession as in the case of one who narrates from a teacher and when asked about his own date of birth mentions a date after the death of his teacher. If the hadeeth is only related by him it is classified automatically as being mawdoo'.

c. Circumstantial factors about the narrator as in the case where the narrator is a shi'ite and the hadeeth he is reporting is about the virtues of the Prophet's descendants.

d. Circumstantial factors in the hadeeth as in the case where the wording is grammatically weak or its text contradicts the basic senses or the obvious meaning of the Qur'aan.

Reasons For Fabrication

I. Political Differences:

Muslim history witnessed a lot of turmoil and disorder after the murder of 'Uthmaan, the third Caliph. Battles between supporters of 'Alee and those of 'Aa'ishah, and later those of Mu'aawiyah, led to the creation of the Shee'ah and the Khawaarij sects[51]. A great deal of hadeeths were fabricated in favour of 'Alee

[50] Sahih Muslim, vol. , p. , no. .Kitaab: Muqaddimah, Baab: Wujoob ar-Riwaayah 'an ath-Thiqaat

[51] The Khaarijites (Ar. Kawaarij) meaning "seceders" were the first sect to appear among Muslims. The Khaarijite division occurred during the Battle of Siffeen (657CE) when one group, mainly from the tribe of Tameem, split off from 'Alee's army. They elected as their chief an obscure soldier called 'Abdullaah ibn Wahb ar-Raasibee and took the name Haaroorites or Muhakkimites. Ibn Wahb and most of his followers were killed in the Battle of Nahrawaan, July 658, against the forces of Caliph 'Alee. However, the rebellion was far from being suppressed. It continued as a series of local uprisings in the following years. 'Alee himself was assassinated in 661 by the Khaarijite, 'Abdur-Rahmaan ibn Muljam, whose wife had lost most of her family members at Nahrawaan.

Beliefs: The Khaarijites held that major sins make the sinner an apostate. Their extreme wing, the Azraqites held that anyone who became a disbeliever in this way could never re-enter the faith and should be killed for his apostasy along with his wives and children. All non-Kaarijite Muslims were regarded as apostates. On the basis of this they developed the principle of isti'raad (religious and the household of the Prophet (ﷺ) by Shee'ah themselves, as admitted by a well-known Shee'ah sources.

Ibn Abee al-Hadeed says:

> "Lies were introduced in hadeeths on merits originally by the Shee'ah. In the beginning they fabricated many hadeeths in favour of their man motivated by enmity towards their opponents. When the Bakriyyah[52] found out what Shee'ah had done, they fabricated on their part hadeeths in favour of their man."[53]

One of their well-known reports in this connection is the hadeeth of Ghadeer Khumm (the spring of Khumm). It says:

"The Prophet took hold of 'Alee's hand in the presence of the Companions, on his way back from the farewell Hajj. He let him stand until all of them knew him. Then he said: This is my attorney and brother and the Caliph after me. So listen to him and obey him."[54]

Another is the City of Knowledge hadeeth attributed to the Prophet (ﷺ):

((أَنَا مَدِينَةُ الْعِلْمِ وَعَلِيٌّ بَابُهَا فَمَنْ أَرَادَ الدَّارَ فَلْيَأْتِ الْبَابَ))

> "I am the city of knowledge and 'Alee is its door. So whoever wants the abode should go to the door."

Ath-Thahabee related that its narrator Ahmad ibn 'Abdillaah ibn Yazeed was a liar and Ibn 'Adee labelled him a fabricator.

Iraq became the center of hadeeth fabrication. 'Aa'ishah is reported to have said: "O people of Iraq, the people of Shaam (Syria) are better than you. A great number of the Companions of the Prophet (ﷺ) went to them. So they reported to murder), which was applied from the beginning of the movement's appearance, even before it had been formulated in theory. This ferocious principle formed a strange contrast with the spirit of tolerance shown by the Khaarijites to non-Muslims. They further held that it was a religious duty to revolt against an Imaam that has sinned.

One of the principal branches of the Khaarijites, the Ibaadites, played an important part in the politics and the religious views in North and East Coast Africa and Eastern Arabia, and have survived there until the present. (Shorter Encyclopaedia of Islam, p. 246-8, The Concise Encyclopaedia of Islam, pp. 222-3, Maqaalaat al-Islaameeyeen, vol. 1, pp. 167-8, al-Milal wan-Nihal, p. 106-110, and Wasatiyyah Ahlis-Sunnah bayna al-Firaq, pp. 291-2) us what we know. But to you a small number of them went. But you reported to us what we know and what we did not."[55]

The Khawaarij, on the other hand, appeared to be strong opponents to both 'Alee and Mu'aawiyah, but due to their strict principle regarding lies, which was considered a major sin to them, they would hardly fabricate hadeeths. Sulaymaan ibn al-Ash'ath said: "None among the people of Ahwaa (dubious wishes) is better in hadeeth than the Khawaarij like 'Imraan ibn Hittaan and Abul-Hasan ibn al-A'raj.[56]

Such favourable remarks about Khawaarij are also recorded by Ibn Taymiyyah who is known to be very strict in giving his judgment on hadeeth.

2. Philosophical Movements

During the last days of the Umayyad Caliphate and throughout the 'Abbaasid period, a number of issues related to faith and the attributes of Allaah were raised. The discussion led to the creation of various factions known as Qadariyyah,[57] Jabariyyah, Mu'tazilah,[58] Murji'ah,[59] Mujassimah, and Mu'attilah.

[56] Al-Kifaayah, p. 131.

[57] Qadarites denied destiny and declared human will free and human action independent of Allaah's will and power. The first to openly make this claim was Ma'bad al-Juhanee who did so towards the end of the era of the Companions. He learned it from a Magian in Basrah. This sect consists of two main branches. One extreme branch which denies Allaah's knowledge, will and power, and His creation of human actions. This branch has virtually died out over the centuries. The other less extreme branches believe in Allaah's prior knowledge of human actions but deny that human actions occur according to His will, by His power and due to His creation. This philosophical school of thought settled on the latter position. (Sharh Lum'atul-I'tiqaad, p. 162)

[58] The Mu'tazilites are followers of Waasil ibn 'Ataa who excluded himself from the circle of al-Hasan al-Basree and affirmed that sinners are in limbo between belief and disbelief and that they will remain forever in the hellfire. 'Amr ibn 'Ubayd followed him in this belief. They denied the divine attributes like the Jahmites, and denied Allaah's Qadar relative to human actions like the Qadarites, and claimed that one who does major sins will be eternally in hell like the Mu'tazilites. (Sharh Lum'atul-I'tiqaad, p. 163)

[59] Murji'ites are those do not consider deeds to be a part of eemaan (faith). In their view, eemaan consists of acceptance in the heart alone. Consequently, according to them, a corrupt and sinful person's faith is complete, regardless of the sins he commits and the righteous deeds he abandons. Furthermore, if he is judged a disbeliever for abandoning some religious rules, it is due to the lack of conviction in his heart and not because of his abandonment of a deed. This is the school of thought of the Jahmites, and it is on the other end of the creedal spectrum from the Khaarijites. (Sharh Lum'atul-I'tiqaad, pp. 162-3)

The supporters of each opinion fabricated contradictory hadeeths either supporting one opinion or rejecting it.

Muhriz Aboo Rajaa, a strong supporter of the Qadariyyah, admitted that they were behind a lot of spurious hadeeths. He said: Don't report anything from anyone among the Qadariyyah as we used to fabricate hadeeths in order to persuade people to believe in Qadar with an intention of receiving reward from Allaah."[60]

Some of the Karraamiyyah[61] made a daring contribution to the fabrication of hadeeths on the merits of certain particular actions. They admitted that the Prophet (ﷺ) had said: "Whosoever speaks lie against me intentionally should reserve his seat in the fire." But they remarked: "We did not speak lie against him but for him instead."[62]

3. Apostates

There were many disbelievers who accepted Islaam as a cover for their underground activities. Because of Islaam's strength they were unable to openly oppose it and plot against it, so they tried to undermine it by inventing a body of slanderous hadeeth to deface Islaam's pure image.

Among them was 'Abdul-Kareem ibn Abil-Awjaa who admitted at the very moment when he was put to death, by the order of Muhammad ibn Sulayman ibn

60 Lisaan al-Meezaan, vol. 1, p. 12.

61 A sect named after Muhammad ibn Karraam as-Sijistaanee from the Nizaar tribe (d. 255AH). He studied in Khurasan, Balkh, Merw and Heart and inadvertently narrated a number of traditions from Ahmad ibn 'Abdillaah Jawbaaree (d. 247) and Muhammad ibn Tameem Faryaanaanee, both of whom were notorious fabricators of hadeeths. After spending five years in Makkah, he returned to Sajistaan, sold all his possessions and proceeded to Naysabur where he was imprisoned by its governor, Muhammad ibn Taahir. Upon his release in 251, he went to Jerusalem where he stayed until he died four years later.

Muhammad ibn Karraam's main theological doctrine, which led to his sect's inclusion among the mushabbihah (anthropormophites), was that Allaah was a "substance (jawhar)", for which some of his followers substituted "body (jism)", though without human body parts, and in contact with the Throne, which is located in space. He followers maintained that Allaah was speaking before He spoke, and could be worshipped before there were any worshippers. Ibn Karraam held that Allaah was subject to certain accidents over which He has power, but not over the world and the objects in it, which were created not by His will, but by the word kun (be).

His other doctrine was that eemaan is constituted by a single utterance of the two declarations of faith, and involves neither conviction (tasdeeq) nor works. This view, though similar to the chief thesis of the Murji'ites, is said to have been held by no one before him. (Shorter Encyclopaedia of Islam, pp. 223-4)

62 Al-Baa'ith al-Hatheeth, p. 79.

‘Alee, the Ameer of Basrah: “By God, I have fabricated four thousand hadeeths forbidding what is allowed and allowing what is forbidden.”[63]

A ridiculous hadeeth about the origin of the Creator is regarded as being one of their daring ventures. It goes as follows: “When God Almighty wanted to create himself He first created a horse and let it gallop till it sweated. Then He created Himself from its sweat.”[64]

Another notorious fabricator, Muhammad ibn Sa‘eed, who was executed by crucifixion by Aboo Ja‘far, the Abbaasid Caliph, invented the following hadeeth on the authority of Humayd from Anas from the Prophet (ﷺ) that he said,

((أَنَا خَاتَمُ النَّبِيِّينَ لاَ نَبِيَّ بَعْدِي إِلاَّ أَنْ يَشَاءَ اللهُ))

“I am the seal of the Prophets and no Prophets will come after me except if Allaah so wishes.”[65] Clearly the man wanted to give credence to his claim of prophethood by adding the exceptional clause.

4. Storytellers:

Amazing stories full of incredible events and attractively presented were always a source of inspiration for the common man. Consequently, storytellers used to go to great lengths to embellish the tales they conveyed to gullible audiences in the mosques. Some storytellers earned their livelihood from entertaining people. To give further credence to their material, they used to mention before their stories a full isnaad. Most of such narrations were vigorously rejected by the traditionists. Sulaymaan ibn Mihraan al-A‘mash, a famous traditionist, entered one of the mosques of Basrah where he heard a storyteller saying: “Al-A‘mash reported to us on the authority of Abee Is’haaq who reported from Aboo Waa’il, etc. On hearing this al-A‘mash seated himself in the middle of the circle and started plucking hairs from his armpit. The storyteller was much annoyed and exclaimed: “Shame! What are you doing while we are discussing matters of knowledge?” Al-A‘mash replied: “What I am doing is better than what you are.” He asked: “How?” Al-A‘mash replied: “Because I am doing what is Sunnah, while you are telling lies. I am al-A‘mash and I reported nothing of what you are saying.”[30] A similar incident happened to Ahmad ibn Hanbal and Yahyaa ibn Ma‘een.

It is reported that while a storyteller in Baghdad was explaining the following verse: “Soon will your Lord raise you to a station of praise and glory,”

[65] Tadreeb ar-Raawee, p. 186.

(Soorah al-Israa, 17: 79) he said that Allaah would seat the Prophet (ﷺ) next to Him on His throne. This explanation was reported to Muhammad ibn Jareer at-Tabaree (d. 922 CE) who rejected the idea vehemently to the extent that he inscribed on his door the following line: "Glorified is He who has neither a companion nor anyone sitting beside Him on the Throne." This created such a fury among the people of Baghdad that they pelted his house with stones till they covered his door.[66]

5. Ignorant Ascetics

Some *hadeeth*s were fabricated in order to create a desire in people to do good deeds and to create in them a fear of evil deeds. Those who did this were the worst kind of fabricators, as they were people who were associated with asceticism, piety and righteousness and the masses readily accepted their fabrications because of their confidence in them. There is a chain letter that claims to be from Shaikh Ahmad who dreamt about the future while sleeping in the Prophet's mosque. It is circulated among every 5 or 10 years and is a complete fabrication. And the Prophet (ﷺ) had said that anyone who tells about dreams that they didn't have would find their seat in the hellfire.

Among the fabricators of the past was Maysarah ibn 'Abdi Rabbih about whom Ibn Hibbaan collected a narration from Ibn Mahdee in which he said: "I said to Maysarah ibn 'Abdi Rabbih: Where did you get these *hadeeth*s; whoever reads such and such will get such and such a reward?" He replied, "I made them up to attract the people (to righteous deeds)."[67]

In order to let the people devote much of their time to supererogatory forms of worship, some ascetics used to fabricate *hadeeth*s on merits of various actions. About four hundred such *hadeeth*s are known to be invented by Ghulaam Khaleel, (d. 275 A.H.), one of the renowned ascetics in Baghdad whose death caused the whole market to close its doors in mourning.[68]

People like Aboo 'Ismah Nooh ibn Abee Maryam al-Marwazee used to invent hadeeths on the merits of each Soorah of the Qur'aan. Aboo 'Ismah later justified his act by saying: "I found people deserting the Qur'aan and occupying themselves with the Fiqh of Aboo Haneefah and the Maghaazee (battles) of Ibn Is'haaq, so I invented these hadeeths for the sake of reward (from Allaah)."

[67] Ad-Du'afaa.

[68] Taareekh Baghdaad, vol. 5, p. 79.

Another example given by Shaykh Naasir ad-Deen al-Albaanee: "The world is prohibited to people of the Hereafter and the Hereafter is prohibited to people of the world. And both are prohibited to the People of Allaah."[69]

6. Nationalism and Factionalism

A. Hadeeth literature contains a lot of material on the merits or otherwise of various towns, most of which is proved to be fabricated. Prejudice for a certain place was indeed a major factor behind such fabrication. Hadeeths on the merits of Jeddah, Basra, Jordan, Khurasaan, Oman, 'Asqalaan, Qizwin, Nasibin, Antioch, 'Ibaadan (Iraq) and condemning Constantinople, Tabriya, and Sana, etc., comprise a large section in Ibn Iraaq's work.

B. Prejudice either for or against a race is another factor behind the circulation of hadeeth such as the following: "The Zanjee (black) commits adultery when he is satisfied and steals when he is hungry. But there is generosity and a helping spirit among them as well."[70]

"Love the Arabs for three reasons: I am an Arab. The Qur'aan is in Arabic and the people of Paradise will converse in Arabic."[71]

"The one who has nothing to give as charity should curse the Jews instead."

C. Prejudice for one's own Imaam and hate for another is well depicted in the following invented hadeeth:

((سَيَكُونُ فِي أُمَّتِي رَجُلٌ يُقَالُ لَهُ مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ إِدْرِيسَ هُوَ أَضَرُّ عَلَى أُمَّتِي مِنْ إِبْلِيسَ وَسَيَكُونُ فِي أَمَّتِي رَجُلٌ يُقَالُ لَهُ أَبُو حَنِيفَةَ هُوَ سِرَاجُ أُمَّتِي)).

"There shall be in my Ummah a man by the name Muhammad ibn Idrees (i.e. ash-Shaafi'ee) who will be more dangerous to my Ummah than Iblees and there shall be a man in my Ummah known as Aboo Haneefah who is the lamp of my Ummah."[72]

Similar factors seem to be at work in spurious hadeeths which support a legal issue held by one Imaam or denounce it altogether.

7. Inventions for Personal Motives:

Some people invented hadeeths to please their rulers. For example, there is a famous incident, credited to Ghayyaath ibn Ibraaheem, a courtier of al-Mahdee, the Abbaasid Caliph. On one occasion, when he came to the court of al-Mahdee, who was fond of pigeons, he was asked to recite a hadeeth for the Caliph. He related, "So and so related to me that the Prophet (ﷺ) said, ((لاَسَبَقَ إِلاَّ فِي نَصْلٍ أَوْ خُفٍّ أَوْ حَافِرٍ أَوْ جِنَاحٍ))

'No competition is allowed except in archery, camel and horse racing and flying pigeons." Caliph al-Mahdee granted him a reward, but when he left, he said, "I bear witness that the back of your neck is that of a liar against the Prophet (ﷺ)." Then he said, "But, I made him do it." So he ordered that his pigeons be slaughtered and he abandoned the practice of keeping pigeons.

Another interesting incident is reported by al-Haakim on the authority of Sayf ibn 'Umar at-Tameemee who said: "I was sitting by Sa'eed ibn Tareef when his son came from the Maktab[73] crying. He said: 'What made you cry?' The child replied: 'The teacher beat me.' Sa'eed said: 'Let me disgrace him today. 'Ikrimah reported to me on the authority of Ibn 'Abbaas referring back to the Prophet (ﷺ) who said: The teachers of your children are the worst among you. They have least mercy upon orphans and are the hardest among you towards the poor."[74]

Hadeeths regarding the merits of a variety of vegetables and grains could easily be traced back to those who were trading in them. Ibn al-Qayyim in his collection of spurious hadeeths known as al-Manaar al-Muneef fee as-Saheeh wa ad-Da'eef, has given such hadeeth regarding the advantages of water-melon, lentils, fish, egg-plant, grapes, beans, broad beans, salt, leek, pomegranate and other vegetables. The following narration is a good example: "Use the pumpkin as it brightens the head and use the lentils as it has been glorified by seventy apostles."[75]

Another example is that of Muhammad ibn al-Hajjaaj al-Lakhmee al-Waasitee who used to sell hareesah so he forged the following hadeeth:

((أَطْعَمَنِي جِبْرِيلُ الْهَرِيسَةَ مِنَ الْجَنَّةِ لأَشُدَّ بِهَا ظَهْرِي لِقِيَامِ اللَّيْلِ)).

Ibn Muhammad and Aboo Haatim labeled him a liar and Ibn al-Jawzee said: "This hadeeth is a fabrication of Muhammad ibn al-Hajjaaj who used to sell hareesah. Most of its chain center around him and other liars stole it from him."

8. Wise Sayings Turned into Hadith[77]:

Some reporters have tried to credit to the Prophet (ﷺ) different parables and sayings of wisdom. For example the following saying is known to be that of Haarith ibn Kaldah, a well-known doctor among the Arabs: "The abdomen is the house of disease and prevention is the head of remedies." But it was wrongly attributed to the Prophet (ﷺ).[78] Other examples are the popular sayings: "Seek knowledge even on to China," and "Seek knowledge from the cradle to the grave."

حَدَّثَنَا حَيْوَةُ بْنُ شُرَيْحٍ حَدَّثَنَا بَقِيَّةُ عَنْ أَبِي بَكْرِ بْنِ أَبِي مَرْيَمَ عَنْ خَالِدِ بْنِ مُحَمَّدٍ الثَّقَفِيِّ عَنْ بِلالِ بْنِ أَبِي الدَّرْدَاءِ عَنْ أَبِي الدَّرْدَاءِ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ ((حُبُّكَ الشَّيْءَ يُعْمِي وَيُصِمُّ)).

Haywah ibn Shurayh informed us [saying that] Baqiyyah informed us from Aboo Bakr ibn Abee Maryam from Khaalid ibn Muhammad ath-Thaqafee from Bilaal ibn Abid-Dardaa from Abud-Dardaa from the Prophet (ﷺ) that he said: "Your love of something blinds and deafens."[79]

Its chain is weak due to Aboo Bakr ibn Abee Maryam who had a poor memory and his narrations were confused.

Forged Hadeeths in Tafseer

Many Qur'aanic commentators used forged traditions in their commentaries without explaining their status. The fabricated hadeeths attributed to Ubay ibn Ka'b on the excellence of the chapters of the Qur'aan were among the most popular. They can be found in the Tafseers of ath-Tha'labee, al-Waahidee, az-

Literature

A number of scholars have made compilations exclusively on fabricated traditions. Among them are, al-Mawdoo'aat by Ibn al-Jawzee, which was the earliest work, al-La'aali al-Masnoo'ah fee al-Ahaadeeth by as-Suyootee and al-Fawaa'id al-Majmoo'ah fee al-Ahaadeeth al-Mawdoo'ah by ash-Shawkaanee. And most recently Silsilah al-Ahaadeeth ad-Da'eefah wal-Mawdoo'ah by Naasirud-deen al-Albaanee.

Matrook (Discarded)

When a narrator is suspected of forgery, the sanad of the hadeeth in which he is mentioned is graded as matrook. Linguistically, the term matrook is the passive participle of the verb تَرَكَ taraka (to leave; abandon; discard). Arabs traditionally referred to the broken egg-shell left behind by the newly emerged chick as the tarikah and this term is also used for the inheritance left behind by the deceased.

Al-Bayqoonee defined the hadeeth matrook as follows:

مَتْرُوكُهُ مَا وَاحِدٌ بِهِ انْفَرَدَ * وَأَجْمَعُوا لِضَعْفِهِ فَهُوَ كَرَدّ

Its discarded (matrook) is what a single person alone narrated * and they are agreed on his weakness so it is karadd.

Thus, the matrook is a strange narration related by a single weak narrator whose weakness is due to his being accused of lying in his narrations or due to his sinful statements or actions.

Identification

The hadeeth which is matrook may be known if any of the following two conditions exist:

1. The narration clearly contradicts universally accepted principles among Muslims and its only chain of narration has in it a suspected forger.
2. The narrator is well known for telling lies in his statements, but there is no evidence to confirm that he lied in his hadeeth narrations.

The following is an example of a hadeeth matrook collected by ad-Daaraqutnee in his Sunan:

حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْقَاسِمِ بْنِ زَكَرِيَّا الْمُحَارِبِيُّ ثَنَا الْحَسَنُ بْنُ مُحَمَّدِ بْنِ عَبْدِ الْوَاحِدِ ثَنَا سَعِيدُ بْنُ عُثْمَانَ حَدَّثَنِي عَمْرُو بْنُ شِمْرٍ عَنْ جَابِرٍ عَنْ أَبِي الطُّفَيْلِ عَنْ عَلِيِّ بْنِ أَبِي طَالِبٍ وَعَمَّارِ بْنِ يَاسِرٍ أَنَّهُمَا سَمِعَا رَسُولَ اللهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يَجْهَرُ فِي الْمَكْتُوبَاتِ بِبِسْمِ اللهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ فِي فَاتِحَةِ الْقُرْآنِ وَيَقْنُتُ فِي صَلَاةِ الْفَجْرِ وَالْوِتْرِ وَيُكَبِّرُ فِي دُبُرِ الصَّلَوَاتِ الْمَكْتُوبَةِ مِنْ قَبْلِ صَلَاةِ الْفَجْرِ غَدَاةَ عَرَفَةَ إِلَى صَلَاةِ الْعَصْرِ آخِرَ أَيَّامِ التَّشْرِيكِ

Muhammad ibn al-Qaasim ibn Zakariyyaa al-Muhaaribee informed us [saying] that al-Hasan ibn Muhammad ibn ‘Abdil-Waahid informed us [saying] that Sa‘eed ibn ‘Uthmaan informed us [saying] that ‘Amr ibn Shimr informed me from Jaabir from Aboo at-Tufayl from ‘Alee ibn Abee Taalib and ‘Ammaar ibn Yaasir that they both heard the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) recite the bismillaah ir-Rahmaan ir-Raheem aloud in the Faatihah of obligatory prayers, make qunoot in Fajr and Witr prayers, and say Allaahu akbar at the end of the obligatory prayers from Fajr in the morning of the Day of Arafat until the ‘Asr prayers on the last Days of Tashreek.[80]

This chain is very weak due mainly to ‘Amr ibn Shimr al-Ja‘fee al-Koofee about whom Ibn Hajar said in Lisaan al-Meezaan from Yahyaa ibn Ma‘een: He is nothing. Al-Joorjaanee called him a deviated liar and Ibn Hibbaan labeled him a Shi’ite who cursed the Companions and narrated forgeries from reliable narrators. An-Nasaa’ee and ad-Daaraqutnee both said his narrations were matrook. Also Jaabir ibn Yazeed al-Ja‘fee is also weak.

Terminology:

The hadeeth matrook is often described as “very weak” (da‘eef jiddan).

Munkar (Rejected)

The label munkar is the passive participle derived from the verb أَنْكَرَ Ankara which means to reject. The mawdoo‘ and matrook narrations were weak due to defects in ‘adaalah (integrity). The munkar narration is weak due to defect in dabt (accuracy). Technically, it refers to a weak hadeeth which contradicts an authentic hadeeth. This was the definition preferred by Ibn Hajar. The two most common definitions by other scholars are:

1. A narration containing a transmitter known for committing excessive mistakes.
2. A narration containing a transmitter known for indecent conduct.

Al-Bayqoonee defined it poetically as follows:

وَمُنْكَرٌ الْفَرْدُ بِهِ رَاوٍ غَدَا * تَعْدِيلُهُ لاَ يَحْمِلُ التَّفَرُّدَا

The munkar is only narrated by a single bad narrator * who cannot stand alone with the responsibility of narration

The Difference between Munkar and Shaathth

Both categories involve contradiction of stronger narrations. However, in the case of shaathth narrations it is a reliable authentic chain which a reliable narrator is in contradiction to another or other narrators who are stronger. While, in the case of munkar narrations, it is a weak transmitter in contradiction to reliable narrators.

The following are two examples of a munkar narration:

The first is found in Sunan at-Tirmithee in the chapter on the merits of 'Alee.

حَدَّثَنَا إِسْمَعِيلُ بْنُ مُوسَى حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ عُمَرَ بْنِ الرُّومِيِّ حَدَّثَنَا شَرِيكٌ عَنْ سَلَمَةَ بْنِ كُهَيْلٍ عَنْ سُوَيْدِ بْنِ غَفَلَةَ عَنْ الصُّنَابِحِيِّ عَنْ عَلِيٍّ رَضِيَ اللَّهُ عَنْهُ قَالَ قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: ((أَنَا دَارُ الْحِكْمَةِ وَعَلِيٌّ بَابُهَا)). قَالَ أَبُو عِيسَى هَذَا حَدِيثٌ غَرِيبٌ مُنْكَرٌ وَرَوَى بَعْضُهُمْ هَذَا الْحَدِيثَ عَنْ شَرِيكٍ وَلَمْ يَذْكُرُوا فِيهِ عَنْ الصُّنَابِحِيِّ وَلَا نَعْرِفُ هَذَا الْحَدِيثَ عَنْ وَاحِدٍ مِنْ الثِّقَاتِ عَنْ شَرِيكٍ وَفِي الْبَاب عَنْ ابْنِ عَبَّاسٍ

Ismaa'eel ibn Moosaa informed us [saying] that Muhammad ibn 'Umar ibn ar-Roomee informed us [saying] that Shareek informed us from Salamah ibn Kuhayl from Suwayd ibn Ghaflah from as-Sunaabihee from 'Alee that he quoted the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) as saying: "I am the abode of wisdom and 'Alee is its door."[81] Aboo 'Eesaa said: This hadeeth is ghareeb (unusual) munkar. Some of them narrate it from Shareek and do not mention "from as-Sunaabihee" and we do not know of this hadeeth being narrated by a reliable narrator from Shareek.

The second is found in Sunan Ibn Maajah in the chapter on foods.

Aboo Bish Bakr ibn Khalaf informed us [saying] that Yahyaa ibn Muhammad ibn Qays al-Madanee informed us [saying] that Hishaam ibn ‘Urwah informed us from his father from ‘Aa’ishah that she quoted the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) as saying: “Eat half ripe dates with dried dates. Eat the old with the new, for Satan gets angry and says: Adam’s child has remained until he has eaten the old with the new.”[82]

Ibn Ma‘een and others rated Aboo Zakariyyaa Yahyaa ibn Muhammad as da‘eef. On the other hand, Ibn ‘Adee stated that his narrations were authentic except in four cases, this being one of them. An-Nasaa’ee said: “This hadeeth is munkar because it is the only narration on eating half ripe dates with dried dates, and Aboo Zakariyyaa has no corroboration for it. Aboo Zakariyyaa is graded by hadeeth critics as shaykh saalih (a good man) on the fifth and sixth level. Therefore, his narrations can only be considered after corroboration by other narrations.” Imaam Muslim selected some of Aboo Zakariyyaa’s narrations for his book on supporting narrations called al-Mutaaba‘aat.

FIVE: Conflict

In vast number of narrations of saying actions and approvals of the Prophet (ﷺ), some apparent contradictions do occur. The first scholar to specifically address this topic in writing was Imaam ash-Shaafi'ee in his text, Ikhtilaaf al-Hadeeth. Ibn Qutaybah also wrote on the topic in his classic, Ta'weel Mukhtalaf al-Hadeeth and so did Aboo Ja'far at-Tahaawee in his work called, Mushkil al-Aathaar, in which he attempted to resolve the apparent contradictions in many well-known narrations.

This field of knowledge is regarded as being among the most significant areas of the science of hadeeth. All scholars are obliged to acquire it. Those who became skilled in its application combined the disciplines of both hadeeth and fiqh and were firmly grounded in Usool al-Fiqh.

Before attempting to resolve apparent conflict, it must be established that all the texts involved are, in fact, authentic. The authentic text would naturally take precedence over any inauthentic text. It would also have to be confirmed that neither of the texts are shaathth, as the confirmed authentic text would be given precedence over the exceptional texts.

1. Jam' (Harmonization)

The general rule for harmonizing and reconciling (jam') contradicting texts is to try to utilize both hadeethic texts rather than nullify one. This is done by treating one as a general text ('aamm) and the other as a specific text (khaas). For example, the hadeeths which prohibit prayers after Salaatul-Fajr until sunrise and after Salaatul-'Asr until sunset[1] appear to contradict the Prophet's authentically recorded practice of praying missed sunnah prayers of Salaatuz-Zuhr after Salaatul-'Asr[2] as well as his permitting one of his companions to pray the missed

[1] Aboo Sa'eed al-Khudree quoted Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) as saying: "No prayer is valid after the 'Asr prayer until the sun sets and no prayer is valid after the dawn prayer until the sun rises." (Sahih Muslim, vol. 2, p. 395, no. 1805)

[2] Umm Salamah said: I heard the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) prohibiting them [two units after the afternoon prayer], but later on I saw him praying them. When he prayed them, he had offered the afternoon prayer. He then came to me while a number of women from the Haraam clan of the Ansaar were sitting with me. He prayed these two units of prayer. I sent a slave-girl to him and told her: Stand beside him and tell him that Umm Salamah has asked: Messenger of Allaah, I heard you prohibiting these two units of prayer [after the afternoon prayer] but I see you praying them yourself. If he makes a sign with his hand, step backward from him. The slave-girl did so. He made a sign with his hand, so she turned away from him. When he finished his prayer, he said:

sunnah prayer of Fajr after the Fard.[3] The first set of hadeeths are taken as a general prohibition of unspecified voluntary prayers, while the second set are taken as specified voluntary prayers which may be done at the prohibited times.

If there is a contradiction between the Prophet's statement and his actions, the general principle is to give preference to his statement over his action because his act may have been specific to himself. For example, the Prophet (ﷺ) forbade his followers from twenty-four hour fasts (wisaal)[4] but was recorded to have done so himself. He told his followers who had more than four wives to choose four and divorce the remainder[5] while he, himself, was married to nine wives at the same time.[6] Sometimes his actions clarified the permissibility of certain acts. For example, 'Aa'ishah related that the Prophet (ﷺ) never urinated standing.[7] However, another Companion, Huthayfah, reported that while on a journey with the Prophet (ﷺ), he observed him go to a village's dump and urinate standing.[8] Or it may indicate that his statement regarding the prohibition of an act was meant to indicate great dislike and not absolute prohibition. As in the case of his prohibiting drinking standing[9] only to openly drink Zamzam standing during his farewell Hajj as well as on other occasions.[10]

2. Tarjeeh (Preference)

If harmonization is not possible, then preference (tarjeeh) is given to one text over the other. Preference may be based on inequality of isnaad or inequality of content (matn). As regards the chain of narrators, those agreed upon by al-Bukhaaree and Muslim are given precedence over saheeh hadeeths found in the other books. The Saheeh hadeeths, in general, are given preference over the Hasan hadeeths. With respect to the content, the literal is preferred to the metaphorical, and the clear (sareeh) is given preference over the implicit (kinaayah). Affirmative evidence takes priority over the negative. Prohibition takes precedence over permissibility.[11] For example, the Prophet (ﷺ) forbade fasting on Saturdays except in Ramadaan[12] and he recommended fasting on the days of 'Arafah[13] and 'Aashooraa.[14] Based on this principle, if either day falls on a Saturday, one should not fast based on the obvious meaning.[15]

3. Naskh (Abrogation)

If neither of the above methods of harmonizing and preferring are possible, the only other recourse is that of abrogation (naskh). Naskh literally means removal

He then stood up and drank the remaining water while standing and said: "Some people dislike to drink water standing, but the Prophet (ﷺ) did as I have just done." [12] As-Sammaa' bint Busr as-Sulamee quoted the Prophet (ﷺ) as saying: "Don't fast on Saturdays except what has been made obligatory on you. And if one you can only find a grape skin or a piece of from a tree, he should chew on it." (Sunan Abu Dawud, vol. 2, p. 665, no. 2415 and authenticated in al-Irwaa, no. 960)

[13] He was asked about fasting on the day of 'Arafah and he replied: "It expiates the sins of the past year and the coming year." He was then asked about fasting on the day of 'Aashooraa, and he responded: "It expiates the sins of the past year." (Sahih Muslim, vol. 2, p. 568, no. 2603)

[14] Sahih Al-Bukhaaree, vol. 3, p. 123, no. 219-220 and Sahih Muslim, vol. 2, p. 550-1, no. 2518.

[15] Most scholars considered fasting on Saturdays permissible based on the following hadeeth collected by Ibn Khuzaimah. Umm Salamah related that Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) used to fast on Saturdays and Sundays more than on any other days, and he used to say, "They are festive days for the polytheists, and I want to act contrary to them." Authenticated in Saheeh Ibn Khuzaymah , vol. 3, p. 318, no. 2167.

or transfer (that is why in Arabic a copyist is called Naasikh). As a technical term in hadeeth science and Fiqh, it means Allaah's abrogation of an earlier law by a later one. Abrogation may occur in Qur'aanic verses and between the Qur'aan and hadeeth. The abrogation of hadeeths is considered as a final means of resolving apparent contradictions in hadeeth texts.

The Methods of Recognition

1. Abrogation can sometimes be recognised by a clear statement of the Prophet (ﷺ) to that effect. An example of this can be found in Buraydah's hadeeth collected by Muslim that the Prophet (ﷺ) said, "I used to forbid from visiting graves but now you should visit them as surely they are reminders of the next life."[16]
2. Sometimes it may appear as an Athar (statement of a Sahaabee). For example, Jaabir ibn 'Abdillaah said, "The latter of the two commands of Allaah's Messenger was to not do wudoo from (eating) things touched by fire (i.e. cooked things)." Collected by at-Tirmithee, Aboo Daawood, an-Nasaa'ee and Ibn Maajah.[17]
3. Occasionally the date of the incidents may point out the abrogation of a law. For example in Shidaad ibn Anees' hadeeth from the Prophet (ﷺ) that he said, "The cupper[18] and the cupped have broken fast." Collected by Aboo Daawood[19] is abrogated by Ibn 'Abbaas' hadeeth in which the Prophet (ﷺ) was cupped while fasting in a state of Ihraam.[20] In some of the narrations of Shidaad's hadeeth it is mentioned that it was at the time of the conquest of Makkah, i.e. 8 A.H. (630 CE). While in Ibn 'Abbaas' narration it was mentioned that he accompanied the Prophet (ﷺ) during the Farewell Pilgrimage, i.e. 10AH (632 CE).
4. The Ijmaa' of the Sahaabah can also indicate abrogation. Not that they abrogated it but that it was known amongst them that the Prophet (ﷺ) had abrogated it. An example can be seen in the case of the hadeeth in which the Prophet (ﷺ) said, "Whoever takes intoxicants whip him (each time he is

SIX: Criticism

By hadeeth criticism is meant the Science of Validation of Hadeeth ('Ilm al-Jarh wa at-Ta'deel), whereby hadeeths are ruled to be reliable or invalid based on certain criteria. The effort to distinguish between narrations from the Prophet (ﷺ), was rooted in his warning, "If anyone tells a lie about me intentionally, let him be sure of his place in the hell fire."[1] This process began during the lifetime of the Prophet (ﷺ) himself. However, at this stage, it meant no more than going to the Prophet (ﷺ) and verifying something he was reported to have said. Dimaam ibn Tha'labah came to the Prophet (ﷺ) on one occasion and asked, "Muhammad, your messenger came to us and told us so and so." The Prophet (ﷺ) replied, "He told you the truth."[2]

A similar form of investigation or verification was reported to have been carried out by 'Alee,[3] Ubayy ibn Ka'b,[4] 'Abdullaah ibn 'Amr,[5] 'Umar,[6] Zaynab wife of Ibn Mas'ood[7] and others. Although the process of asking the Prophet (ﷺ) ceased with his death, the first Caliph, Aboo Bakr, 'Umar and 'Alee as well as other companions like 'Aa'ishah and Ibn 'Umar continued these efforts of hadeeth criticism. With the turmoil which came at the end of Caliph 'Uthmaan's reign and throughout the rule of Caliph 'Alee, scholars among the students of the Companions became very strict in the transmission of hadeeths. Scholars among the students of the Companions continued the hadeeth criticism efforts, like Sa'eed ibn al-Musayyab (d. 93 AH); Saalim ibn 'Abdillaah ibn 'Umar (d. 106AH); 'Alee ibn Husayn ibn 'Alee (d. 93AH); and 'Urwah ibn az-Zubayr (d. 94AH). Among their students in the second century after the Hijrah, three scholars stood out in the region of Madeenah, az-Zuhree (d. 124AH), Yahyaa ibn Sa'eed and Hishaam ibn 'Urwah. During the periods of the second and third centuries, scholars became noted for their extensive travels in the search for hadeeth narrations. So much so that the Baghdadi scholar, Yahyaa ibn Ma'een (d. 233AH), said, "There are four kinds of people who never became mature during their life; among them is he who writes down hadeeths in his own town and never makes a journey for this purpose."[8]

The basic method of criticism employed by hadeeth scholars was according to Ibn al-Mubaarak's (118-181 AH) statement, "To find an authentic statement, one needs to compare the words of scholars with each other."[9] This was the method employed by scholars from the very early times. By gathering all the related hadeeths, comparing them carefully with each other, the scholars were able to judge the accuracy of their teachers. The method of comparison was practiced in a number of different ways. The following are the four main ways:

1. Comparison between the hadeeths of different students of the same scholar.
2. Comparison between the statements of the same scholar at different times in his life.
3. Comparison between oral transmission of the scholar and written texts.
4. Comparison between a narrated hadeeth and its related Qur'aanic texts.

1. Comparison between Different Students

This method can be demonstrated by the case of the third century scholar, Ibn Ma'een (d. 233AH) who went to Moosaa ibn Ismaa'eel in Basrah, a student of the great scholar Hammaad ibn Salamah, and asked him to read the books of Hammaad to him. When Moosaa asked if he had read the books to any other students of Hammaad, Ibn Ma'een replied that he had read them to seventeen other students. Moosaa asked him what the purpose was of all these different readings, to which Ibn Ma'een replied, "Hammaad ibn Salamah committed mistakes and his students added some more mistakes to his. So I want to distinguish between the mistakes of Hammaad and those of his students. If I find all of Hammaad's students committing the same mistake, then the source is Hammaad. If I find the majority saying one thing and a single student contradicting them, the mistake was that of the student."[10]

Ibn Ma'een was not only able to distinguish between the mistakes of the teacher and his students, but he was also able to grade the students according to their relative levels of accuracy. Ibn Ma'een was not the first to use this method. It existed from the time of Caliph Aboo Bakr. For example, when a grandmother came to him asking about her share of the inheritance of her grandson, he replied, "I have not found a share for you in Allaah's Book and I don't know that the Prophet (ﷺ) fixed a share for such a case." When he asked the other companions about it, al-Mugheerah said that the Prophet (ﷺ) gave the grandmother a sixth. Aboo Bakr then asked if anyone could confirm his statement and Muhammad ibn Maslamah al-Ansaaree stood up and repeated al-Mugheerah's statement. Caliph Aboo Bakr then gave her one sixth.[11]

On one occasion Aboo Moosaa al-Ash'aree went to visit 'Umar and called out greetings to him three times. When he did not hear any response, he left. 'Umar then called him and asked him what prevented him from entering the house. He replied that he heard the Prophet (ﷺ) say, "When anyone of you asks permission to enter three times and it isn't granted, he should go away." 'Umar then demanded that he prove that this statement was correct otherwise he would punish him. So Aboo Moosaa brought a witness who confirmed it. 'Umar then informed him that he did not doubt the authenticity of his report but was only concerned that people be very careful in what they transmit from the Prophet (ﷺ).[12]

When 'Abdullaah ibn 'Umar questioned Aboo Hurayrah's narration of the Prophet, "Whoever attends the funeral until the funeral prayer receives one qiraat of reward, but whoever attends the funeral until the burial receives two qiraats," he took him by the hand to 'Aa'ishah who confirmed the accuracy of his narration.[13]

This method was continued by the students of the companions like Ibn Abee

Mulaykah,[14] az-Zuhree[15] and Shu'bah, etc.

An Example of this method used by Muslim ibn al-Hajjaaj, student of al-Bukhaaree

It is reported that Ibn 'Abbaas spent a night in the apartment of his aunt Maymoonah, wife of the Prophet (ﷺ). During the night, the Prophet (ﷺ) got up, made wudoo and began to pray. Ibn 'Abbaas did the same and stood on the Prophet's left side. The Prophet (ﷺ) shifted him from his left to his right side. The hadeeth scholar, Yazeed ibn Abee Zinaad, narrated this incident from Kurayb, from Ibn 'Abbaas, stating that Ibn 'Abbaas stood on the right side of the Prophet (ﷺ) and he shifted him to his left.

Imaam Muslim gathered all of the narrations of Yazeed's colleagues who studied under Kurayb with him and found that they unanimously agreed that Ibn 'Abbaas first stood on the left of the Prophet (ﷺ) and was shifted to his right. Then he gathered all the narrations of Kurayb's colleagues who studied under Ibn 'Abbaas and found that they also unanimously agreed that Ibn 'Abbaas first stood on the left and was shifted to the Prophet's right. This was sufficient to prove Yazeed's mistake, however Imaam Muslim did not stop there. He further gathered all the narrations of other companions who prayed alone with the Prophet (ﷺ) showing that they too prayed on his right side. Consequently, he not only proved Yazeed's mistake but also confirmed that the correct method to stand on the right.[16]

2. Comparison between a Scholar's Statements

On one occasion 'Aa'ishah asked her nephew, 'Urwah, to collect some hadeeths from 'Abdullaah ibn 'Amr since he had learned a lot from the Prophet (ﷺ). When 'Urwah returned and related what he had heard from 'Abdullaah, 'Aa'ishah had doubts about a hadeeth describing how knowledge would be taken away from the earth. A year or so later, she requested 'Urwah to go back to 'Abdullaah and collect some more hadeeths and to ask him, in particular, about the hadeeth concerning the removal of knowledge from the earth. When he returned, he narrated the hadeeths including the one on the removal of knowledge. ‘Aa’ishah then said, “I believe he must be correct, because he has neither added anything to it nor deleted anything from it.”[17]

3. Comparison Between Memory and Texts

On one occasion when Muhammad ibn Muslim and al-Fadl ibn ‘Abbaad were studying hadeeths with Aboo Zur‘ah, Muhammad and al-Fadl disagreed on the wording of a particular hadeeth so they asked Aboo Zur‘ah to judge between them. He referred to his books and found the hadeeth in question and confirmed that Muhammad was mistaken.

On another occasion, ‘Abdur-Rahmaan ibn ‘Umar narrated a hadeeth from Aboo Hurayrah concerning the delayal of Zuhr prayer in summer. Aboo Zur‘ah stated that it was incorrect. When ‘Abdur-Rahmaan returned to his hometown and checked his books, he found that he was in error. He then wrote to Aboo Zur‘ah, acknowledging his mistake, and asked him to inform his colleagues and students of his mistake, as shame is much better than the hellfire.[18]

4. Comparison Between Hadeeth and Qur’aan

‘Umar ibn al-Khattaab used this method in rejecting Faatimah bint Qays’ claim concerning maintenance for divorced women. Faatimah reported that Aboo ‘Amr ibn Hafs divorced her irrevocably when he was away from home and he sent his representative to her with some barley. She was displeased with his offer and when he told her that she had no claim on him, she went to the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) and complained. He replied, “There is no maintenance due to you from him.” He then instructed her to spend the ‘iddah in Umm Shurayk’s house…[19] When ash-Sha‘bee narrated Faatimah’s hadeeth in the Grand Mosque, al-Aswad ibn Yazeed, who was sitting nearby, picked up some pebbles and threw them in ash-Sha'bee's direction saying, "Woe be to you. How can you narrate that when 'Umar said, "We cannot abandon the Book of Allaah and the Sunnah of the Messenger (ﷺ) for the words of a single woman. We don't know whether she remembered or forgot. There is maintenance and lodging for [the irrevocably divorced woman.] Allaah, the Exalted and Majestic, said, "Do not expel them from their houses, nor should they themselves leave, unless they have committed clear indecency." (Soorah at-Talaaq, 65: 1)[20]

This method was also applied by 'Aa'ishah in several cases.

Rational Criticism of Hadeeth

The previously mentioned methods of comparison all involve rational thinking. Reasoning was used by the hadeeth scholars in criticizing both the texts and chains of narrators of hadeeths. It cannot be said that authentication was without rational analysis. However, rational criticism does have its limits as 'Alee ibn Abee Taalib had said, "If the religion were based purely on [human] logic and reason, the bottom of the sock has more right to be wipe than the top. However, I saw the Messenger of Allaah wipe the bottom [and not the top]."[21] The criticisms of Modernist Muslims tend to be based on rational arguments. For example, the hadeeth concerning the leadership of women is criticized based on the perceived inherent equality of men and women. Similarly, Dr. Maurice Bucaille, in the end of his excellent work, The Qur'an the Bible and Modern Science, argues that the hadeeth of the fly must be false because modern science only know of disease coming from flies. Were the same arguments used concerning the prohibition of sleeping on the stomach due to medical arguments prior to the seventies, they would have all been proven wrong by medical knowledge of the past two decades.

Era Classification of Narrators

Scholars of hadeeth, in the early stages of the development of the hadeeth sciences, classified the narrators and collectors of hadeeths into various categories. One of these categories is the "era" category that is based on the period in which the narrators and collectors lived, as well as the degree to which they were in touch with the renowned scholars of their time. The purpose of this classification was to facilitate research into the continuity of the chain of narrators. The following is a list of the levels of narration as compiled by the eminent muhaddith, Ibn Hajar al-'Asqlaanee, in his work entitled Taqreeb at-Tahdheeb.

LEVEL	NARRATORS	DESCRIPTION
1st	The Sahaabah	e.g. Aboo Hurayrah
2nd	Major Taabe'oon	e.g. Sa'eed ibn al-Musayyab
3rd	Medial Taabe'oon	like al-Hasan al-Basree and Ibn Seereen.
4th	Lower Median Taabe'oon	Their narrations of hadeeth were mostly from Major Taabe'oon and not the Sahaabah e.g. az-Zuhree and Qataadah.
5th	Minor Taabe'oon	Those who met only one or two of the Sahaabah but were not recorded as having narrated anything from them. E.g. al-Aa'mash and Aboo Haneefah
6th	Contemporaries of the Minor Taabe'oon who were not known to have met any of the Sahaabah. E.g. Ibn Jurayj
7th	Major Taabe'ut-Taabe'een	Students of the Taabe'oon. e.g. ath-Thawree and Maalik
8th	Medial Taabe'ut-Taabe'een	e.g. Ibn 'Uyaynah and Ibn 'Ulayyah
9th	Minor Taabe'ut-Taabe'een	e.g. ash-Shaafa'ee and 'Abdur-Razzaaq
10th	Major narrators from the Taabe'ut-Taabe'een	Those who never even met any of the Taabe'oon e.g. Ahmad Ibn Hambal
11th	Medial narrators from the Taabe'ut-Taabe'een	e.g. al-Bukhaaree
12th	Minor narrators from the Taabe'ut-Taabe'een	e.g. at-Tirmithee

Reliability Classification of Narrators

Another of the categories into which scholars of hadeeth classified the narrators and collectors of *hadeeth*s is that of the 'reliability' category. This category was based on the relative reliability of the narrators with respect to their retentive powers, their moral character, their political affiliations, their fame or lack of it and their philosophical leanings.

In this category the narrators are placed in classes of descending order and certain terms are used to indicate those who belong to the class.

CLASS	DESCRIPTION	TERMINOLOGY
1st	The Companions of the Prophet (ﷺ)	Sahaabee, Sahaabeeyyah; Lahu Suhbah
2nd	Highly praised narrators due to their impeccable memories	Thiqah thiqah; Thiqah haafiz; or Awthaq an-Naas
3rd	Generally reliable narrators:	Thiqah; Mutqin; Thabt or 'Adl
4th	Truthful narrators whose reliability is slightly tainted because of occasional mistakes	Sadooq; Laa bas bih or Laysa bihi bas
5th	Truthful narrators known to make mistakes due to poor memories, senility, misinterpretations or the like. Also included in this group are those accused of any of the following forms of Bid'ah Tashayyu', Qadr, Nasb, Irjaa or Tajahhum.	Sadooq yukhti; Yahim; Sayyi al-Hifz; Lahu awhaam or Taghayyara bi aakhirah
6th	A narrator of only a few *hadeeth*s whose rejected *hadeeth*s are not due to defects found in him. His *hadeeth*s should be checked out	Maqbool / Maqboolah
7th	One from whom more than one narrator has reported *hadeeth*s but he has not been classified as Thiqah.	Mastoor or Majhool al-haal
8th	A narrator who has been criticized of being unreliable	Da'eef
9th	A narrator from whom only one other narrator has reported *hadeeth*s and he or she is not considered Thiqah.	Majool
10th	An unreliable narrator in the opinion of all	Matrook; Saaqit; Matrooq al-hadeeth or Waahin al-hadeeth
11th	One accused of lies	Uttuhima bil-kathib
12th	One who is classified as a liar or fabricator	Kaththaab or Waddaa'

> ‘Alee ibn Khashram reported that ‘Eesaa ibn Yoonus reported from ‘Ubaydullaah ibn Abee Ziyaad al-Qaddaah from Shahr ibn Hawshab from Asmaa bint Yazeed that the Prophet (ﷺ) said, “Allaah’s greatest name is in these two verses: “And your God (Elaah) is one God, there is no God beside Him, the Most Merciful (Rahmaan), the Ever-Merciful (Raheem),” and the beginning of Aal Imraan: “Alif, Laam, Meem; Allaah, besides him there is no God; He is the Ever-Living (Hayy), the Self-Subsisting (Qayyoom).”

Collected by at-Tirmithee who classified it as Hasan Saheeh (vol. 5, p. 179, no. 3543); Ibn Maajah and Ahmad.

HADEETH RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

Step One: List the narrators of the hadeeth and write down the key points from their biographies as found in Taqreeb at Tah’theeb.

Step Two: If any narrator is classified as being da‘eef by any of the terms used in class: 7-12, the hadeeth is automatically classified “Da’eef” and is rejected.

Step Three: The years in which they died should next be compared to make sure that they all could have me each other. If no two narrators could have met each other, the sanad is classified as “Munqati’” and the hadeeth itself is judged da‘eef and rejected.

Step Four: The eras of the narrators should next be compared in order to determine whether they all could have narrated from whom they claim to be narrating from. If any narrator is found to be of an era that could not possibly narrate from whom he claims to be narrating and is himself classified from the 5th or 6th class of narrators, the hadeeth is then considered da'eef and rejected. If the narrator is from the 4th class or above, a further check should be made to see if this was an exception, and if not, it is then classified mursal and put aside as possible support for other questionable narrations.

Step Five: If the chain of narrators appears to be continuous and any of the narrators are from classes 4 to 6, the hadeeth is then classified as hasan and can be used as proof to establish a point of Islaamic law which must be recognized as a valid part of Sharee'ah.

Step Six: If the chains of narrators are all from classes: 1 to 3, the hadeeth is then classified as saheeh and is given precedence over any hadeeth hasan which contradicts it.

Step Seven: Check for other narrations of the hadeeth and research its chain as a possible support to elevate the hadeeth from da'eef to hasan li ghayrih or from hasan li thaatih to saheeh li thaatih

See Appendix I for the pages from Taqreeb at-Tah'theeb relevant to this hadeeth.

SEVEN: Grading

Hadeeths were graded according to the numbers of narrators on each level of the isnaad into two main groups: mutawaatir (مُتَوَاتِر) and aahaad (آحَاد).

1. Mutawaatir (Continuously Recurrent)

It is the report of a large number[1] of narrators whose agreement on a lie is inconceivable on all levels of the isnaad from the beginning until the end.[2] According to the majority of scholars, the authority of the mutawaatir hadeeth is equivalent to that of the Qur'aan. It creates certainty (yaqeen) and the knowledge it produces is equivalent to knowledge acquired through sense perception.[3] The mutawaatir may be further subdivided into two other groups: mutawaatir bil-lafz (recurrent wording) and mutawaatir bil-ma'naa (recurrent meaning)

a) Mutawaatir bil-Lafz (مُتَوَاتِر بِاللَّفْظ)

All narrations must have identical wording. This type of mutawaatir hadeeth is extremely rare. There is a disagreement among scholars as to the exact number of verbally recurrent hadeeths. It is generally suggested that it does not exceed ten. An example of such a hadeeth can be found in the following narration from the Prophet (ﷺ):

((مَنْ كَذَّبَ عَلَيَّ مُتَعَمِّدًا فَلْيَتَبَوَّأْ مِقْعَدَهُ مِنَ النَّارِ))

"Whoever lies about me deliberately should take his seat in the hellfire."[4]

This hadeeth is narrated by over seventy Companions in the same wording and likewise those after them.

[1] There was a difference of opinion with regard to the minimum number of narrators required. The preferred view is ten (Tadreeb ar-Raawee, vol. 2, p. 177).

b) Mutawaatir bil-ma'naa (مُتَوَاتِر بِالْمَعْنَى)

The conceptual mutawaatir wherein a large number of hadeeth transmitters concur in the meaning but differ in wording or in form is quite frequent. For example, the rituals of formal prayer, Hajj, fasting, quantities of zakaah, qisaas rules, etc. were witnessed by a large number of companions and were transmitted by multitudes down through the ages.

Some scholars have made compilations of the mutawaatir hadeeths. The most famous of them is al-Azhar al-Mutanaathirah by as-Suyootee.

2. Aahaad (Solitary)

Also known as the khabar al-waahid (the narration of an individual) is a hadeeth in which the numbers of narrators at any level of the isnaad do not reach anywhere near the minimum number for mutawaatir hadeeths. Most scholars hold that it is a hadeeth that does not impart positive knowledge (yaqeen) on its own unless it is supported by extraneous or circumstantial evidence. Other scholars held that it constitutes knowledge, which is derived from thorough study and systematic deduction, as opposed to knowledge based on unequivocal proof provided by mutawaatir narration. According to Imaam Ahmad ibn Hanbal and others, aahaad can engender positive knowledge (yaqeen).[5] Some scholars have rejected it on the basis of an analogy they drew with a provision of the law of evidence, namely that the testimony of one witness falls short of legal proof. The majority of jurists, however, agree that aahaad may establish a rule of law provided that it is related by a reliable narrator and the contents of the report are not repugnant to reason.[6] Many scholars have held that aahaad produces speculative knowledge (zann) acting upon which is only preferable. In the event where other supportive evidence can be found in its favor or when there is nothing to oppose its contents, then acting upon aahaad is obligatory.[7] However, according to the majority of the scholars of the four schools of law, acting upon aahaad is obligatory even if aahaad fails to create positive knowledge. Thus, in practical legal matters, a preferable conjecture is sufficient as a basis of obligation.'[8]

Ahaad as Evidence in 'Aqeedah

Regarding the use of hadeeth as evidence, the Egyptian Jurist, Aboo Zahrah, claimed that according to the majority of scholars the aahaad should not be relied upon as the basis of belief ('aqeedah).[9] However, the texts of the Qur'aan and the Sunnah, the way of the Companions and the sayings of scholars are all clear evidence to the necessity of accepting hadeeth aahaad in all matters of religion, whether laws or 'aqeedah. To differentiate between them is an innovation (bid'ah) unknown among the Salaf. This is why Ibn al-Qayyim said: "This differentiation is false, according to the consensus of the Ummah (the Muslim nation). This Ummah used to accept, and still does, these hadeeths in matters of the unseen (matters of 'Aqeedah), the same way it accepts them in matters of laws and actions. The reason being that even legal matters contain reports about Allaah commanding such and such, and prescribed it as a necessity of the religion. His laws and religion are a reflection of His Names and Attributes. The Companions, the Successors, their followers and followers of hadeeth and Sunnah, all accepted these reports in matters of the Divine Attributes, predestination, the Names (of Allaah) and in laws. It has never been reported from any of them, that they accepted [hadeeth aahaad] only in matters of laws and not in matters of Allaah, His Names or His Attributes. Therefore, where are the Salaf of those who differentiate between these two ['Aqeedah and Laws]? Yes, indeed. Their Salaf are some of Ahlul-Kalaam[10] of later generations. These people had no interest in what Allaah, His Messenger and the Companions have said. They hinder people's hearts from following the guidance of the Qur'aan, the Sunnah and the sayings of the Companions regarding such matters. Instead, they refer to the sayings of Ahlu1-Kalaam and the principles of those who seek to complicate matters... They have even claimed Ijmaa‘ (unanimity of scholars) on this rule. However, what they claimed to be Ijmaa‘ was not recorded of any leading Muslim scholar (Imaam). Nor was it recorded from any of the Companions or the Successors. We demand from them a valid differentiation between what can or cannot be accepted of aahaad reports in matters of religion, supported by clear proof. However, they will never find anything to validate their differentiation between ‘aqeedah and laws. They will only find false claims.” (I‘laam al-Muwaqqi‘een)

[10] Scholastic theologians and philosophers.

Differentiating between matters of ‘aqeedah and laws, with regards to accepting hadeeth aahaad, is a philosophy alien to Islaam. The righteous predecessors (the salaf), including the four Imaams that most Muslims follow today, did not know, nor did they approve, of such an alien philosophy. The aayaat and *hadeeth*s contain matters of belief, along with matters of law and Sharee‘ah (Islaamic Jurisprudence). The texts of the Qur’aan and the Sunnah make obedience to the Messenger (ﷺ) obligatory on Muslims. This obedience, no doubt, is contained in the Qur’aanic verse:

﴿ وَمَا كَانَ لِمُؤْمِنٍ وَلاَ مُؤْمِنَةٍ إِذَا قَضَى اللهُ وَرَسُولُهُ أَمْرًا أَنْ يَكُونَ لَهُمُ الْخِيَرَةُ مِنْ أَمْرِهِمْ ﴾

“It is not for a believer, man or woman, when Allaah and His Messenger have decreed a matter that they should have an option in their decision.” (*Soorah al-Ahzaab,*33: 36)

This verse confirms the obligation of obeying the Messenger (ﷺ) and following him in matters of belief and laws, without distinction. Also, Allaah said, “And whatever the Messenger gives you, take it…” (Soorah al-Hashr, 59: 7). In this verse “whatever” means everything, without exception, beliefs and laws. There are many other similar verses, all of which are mentioned by Imaam Ash-Shaafi‘ee in his book, Ar-Risaalah. The differentiation between ‘aqeedah and laws has no clear evidence to support it. Consequently, it is fundamentally false, and what is false in essence and beginnings can only produce false ends.

The differentiation between ‘aqeedah and laws is based on the earlier mentioned claim that aahaad hadeeths only produces zann (speculative knowledge). This zann is considered raajih (closer to certainty than to falsehood) and therefore must be adhered to in matters of Laws, as agreed by all scholars. However, they claim that this zann raajih cannot be accepted in matters of 'Aqeedah, belief and the unseen. The following verses are usually quoted as evidence for this distinction:

﴿ إِنْ يَتَّبِعُونَ إِلاَّ الظَّنَّ وَمَا تَهْوَى الأَنْفُسُ ﴾

> "They follow nothing but a guess (z̲ann) and that which the souls desire." (*Soorah an-Najm,*53: 23) and,

﴿ إِنَّ الظَّنَّ لاَ يُغْنِي مِنَ الْحَقِّ شَيْئًا ﴾

> "Certainly, conjecture (z̲ann) can be of no avail against the truth." (Soorah Yoonus, 10: 36)

Allaah criticizes the unbelievers for following conjecture and guessing in these and other similar verses. Those who use these verses as evidence have ignored the fact that the rejected z̲ann, mentioned in these verses, is not the z̲ann raajih̲ of the h̲adeeth aah̲aad, which is accepted by scholars. The z̲ann, mentioned in the above verses, is a doubt that is built on guessing and conjecture. Al-Lisaan and an-Nihaayah, both classical Arabic dictionaries, define this kind of z̲ann as follows: "Z̲ann: A doubt that arises inside yourself, which you then you take as certainty and refer to it for judgment." This is the z̲ann that Allaah criticized the disbelievers for believing in. What supports this meaning is the Qur'aanic verse:

﴿ إِنْ يَتَّبِعُونَ إِلاَّ الظَّنَّ وَإِنْ هُمْ إِلاَّ يَخْرُصُونَ ﴾

> "They only follow conjecture (z̲ann), and they do nothing but lie." (Soorah al-An'aam, 6: 116)

Allaah said that this rejected z̲ann is built on conjecture and doubt. If the z̲ann rejected in the above verses is the z̲ann raajih̲, as some claim, then this form of z̲ann cannot be accepted in matters of laws also for the following two reasons:

First: Allaah strongly criticized the unbelievers for depending on z̲ann in all matters and did not differentiate between 'aqeedah and laws.

Second: In some verses, Allaah specifically mentioned that the z̲ann that He criticized is in matters of laws also. For example: "Those who took partners with Allaah will say, 'If Allaah had willed, we would not have taken partners with Him, nor would our fathers (matters of 'Aqeedah and belief), and we would not have forbidden anything (matters of law).' Likewise denied those who were before them, till they tasted of My wrath. Say: Have you any knowledge that you can produce before us? Indeed, you follow nothing but conjecture (z̲ann) and you do nothing but lie." (Soorah al-An'aam, 6: 148)

What further explains this Qur'aanic verse is: "Say (O Muhammad): The things that My Lord has forbidden are the major evils, whether committed openly or secretly, sins, oppression, worshipping others besides Allaah without authority to do so, and saying things about Allaah of which you have no knowledge." (Soorah al-A'raaf, 7: 33).

These verses confirm that the rejected zann is the zann that, linguistically means doubts, guessing, conjecture and sayings that are not based on knowledge. According to the above verses, this kind of zann is rejected in matters of both belief and laws.

That being the case, all verses and hadeeths that make it obligatory on Muslims to accept hadeeth aahaad in matters of laws, also make it obligatory to accept them in matters of 'aqeedah.

Actually, the claim that 'aqeedah cannot be taken from hadeeth aahaad is itself an 'aqeedah for which unequivocal and indisputable proof for its validity must be produced, otherwise, those who believe it fall into self-contradiction. They cannot produce such evidence because their claim is built on zann (doubts and guessing), which are rejected in matters of laws, and even more so in matters of 'aqeedah. Thus, they have fallen into a worse situation than what they sought to escape from. They tried to escape the zann raajih, by following zann marjooh (rejected zann), "Then take admonition, O you with eyes (to see)." (Soorah al-Hashr, 59: 2). They ended up in misguidance because they rejected the light and guidance of the Qur'aan and the Sunnah and, instead, followed men's opinions and ideas."

Evidence for Hadeeth Aahaad in Matters of 'Aqeedah

There are many proofs that specifically make obligatory accepting hadeeth aahaad in 'aqeedah.

First: Allaah said, "And it is not proper for all the believers to go out to fight. Out of every batch, a group of individuals should remain behind, that they may get instruction in religion, and warn their people when they return to them, so they may beware." (Soorah at-Tawbah, 9: 122)

In this verse Allaah encouraged the believers to have a group from among them to stay with the Prophet (ﷺ) to learn their religion from him. There is no doubt that this rule applies not only to matters of laws and commandments, but also to matters of 'aqeedah. Furthermore, the teacher and his pupil must start with the most important aspects of the religion and then what is of lesser importance. Also, it is certain that matters of 'aqeedah (belief and the unseen) are more important than matters of laws and commandments. Therefore, Allaah encouraged this group, from among the believers, to learn the religion, in matters of both 'aqeedah and law. Also, He ordered them to warn their people when they return to them by teaching them matters of both 'aqeedah and law. If matters of 'aqeedah cannot be taken from hadeeth aahaad along with matters of law, why did Allaah encourage the group (of individuals) to warn their people? This Qur'aanic verse contains a clear indication that knowledge can be obtained through the group's warning their people. Therefore, the above-mentioned Qur'aanic verse clearly demonstrates that solitary hadeeths must be accepted in matters of belief and Laws.

Second: Allaah said,

﴿ وَلاَ تَقْفُ مَالَيْسَ لَكَ بِهِ عِلْمٌ ﴾

"And follow not that which you have no knowledge of." (Soorah al-Israa, 17: 36)

It is well known that Muslims, since the time of the Companions, followed and accepted hadeeth aahaad in laws, belief, and matters of the unseen, such as the creation, signs of the Last Day and Allaah's Attributes, etc. If these hadeeth aahaad are not to be accepted with certainty in matters of belief and the unseen, then the companions, Taabi'oon (the second generation of Islaam) and all the leading scholars of Islaam have all followed that of which they had no real knowledge, as Imaam Ibn al-Qayyim said, "No true Muslim could utter such nonsense."

Third: Allaah said,

﴿ يَآأَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا إِنْ جَآءَكُمْ فَاسِقٌ بِنَبَإٍ فَتَبَيَّنُوا ﴾

"O you who believe! If a rebellious evil person comes to you with a news, verify it." (Soorah al-Hujuraat, 49: 6)

This Qur'aanic verse used the word tabayyanoo, and in another recitation tathabbatoo, which both mean, "verify it". This Qur'aanic verse implies that if a truthful Muslim brought a report, then the news must be taken with certainty. Tathabbut (verifying) in this case is not obligatory on Muslims; rather, it must be accepted at once. As a result, Ibn al-Qayyim said: "This (Qur'aanic verse) means that the aahaad report is to be accepted without the necessity of verification. If this report did not lead to certainty, then verification would have been ordered until certainty was achieved. Evidence for this understanding can be found in the fact that the Salaf and outstanding scholars of Islaam used to always say: 'The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) said, did, ordered or forbade such and such.' They were well known for this mode of speech. One reads in many places in Saheeh Al-

Bukhaaree - the most correct book after Allaah's Book, the phrase: 'The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) said…' [The term "said"] is an expression of certainty, otherwise [Imaam al-Bukhaaree] would have said: 'The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) was reported to have said…' Likewise, many hadeeths narrated by the Companions contain the phrase: 'The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) said...' even though the Companion who narrated the hadeeth only heard it from another companion, and not directly from the Prophet (ﷺ). The statement, 'the Prophet (ﷺ) said...', is a testimony from the narrator that he accepts, with certainty, that the Messenger (ﷺ) did or said what the report says he did or said. If the aahaad report does not lead to certainty, then the Companion or the narrator has followed that which he has no knowledge of and used it as proof coming from the Messenger (ﷺ)." (I'laam al-Muwaqqi'een).

Fourth: The Sunnah of the Messenger (ﷺ) and his Companions confirm that aahaad reports are acceptable in matters of 'aqeedah. The Sunnah of the Messenger (ﷺ) and his Companions, during the Messenger's life and after his death, unequivocally confirm that there is no difference between 'aqeedah and laws, if both are narrated in hadeeth aahaad. The Sunnah confirms that the hadeeth aahaad is a proof in itself in all matters of belief and law. The following are some examples of authentic hadeeths that prove this point:

Imaam al-Bukhaaree wrote [in his book]: "Chapter: Accepting the aahaad report by a truthful man in Athaan, prayer, fasting, inheritance and laws, and Allaah's saying: "Out of every batch, a group of individuals should remain behind, that they may get instruction in religion, and warn their people when they return to them, so they may beware." (Soorah at-Tawbah, 9: 122)

A single man may be referred to as a group (taa'ifah) because Allaah said:

﴿ وَإِنْ طَآئِفَتَانِ مِنَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اقْتَتَلُوا فَأَصْلِحُوا بَيْنَهُمَا ﴾

> "And if two groups among the believers fight, reconcile between them..." (Soorah al-Hujuraat, 49: 9).

If two individual men fought each other, they are also addressed by this Qur'aanic verse. Also, "O you who believe! If a corrupt person comes to you with a news, verify it." (Soorah al-Hujuraat, 49: 6) The Prophet (ﷺ) continuously sent governors to the provinces and leaders for the armies, one after another. If one of them forgot the Sunnah, he would be reminded of it and would have to accept it without verification."[11]

[11] Saheeh Al-Bukhaaree,

Afterwards, al-Bukhaaree narrated many hadeeths to support the acceptance aahaad reports. He wanted to prove that aahaad reports must be adhered to and accepted with certainty. The following are some of these hadeeths followed by my explanation:

1. Maalik ibn al-Huwayrith said: "Some young men of around the same age came to the Prophet (ﷺ) and stayed with him for about twenty days. The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) was very merciful and kind [to us]. When he felt that we missed our families and felt homesick, he asked us about those [of our families] whom we left behind, and we told him about them. He then said: Go back to your families and stay with them, teach them, instruct them [to do good] and pray as you saw me pray."[12]

The Messenger (ﷺ) ordered each one of these young men to teach his family. Teaching contains matters of belief The first of what is contained in the meaning of teaching must be about 'Aqeedah. If aahaad report was not accepted, then this order of the Prophet (ﷺ) would have been empty of any meaning.

2. Anas ibn Maalik said that people of Yemen came to the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ), saying: "Send someone with us to teach us Islaam and the Sunnah." The Messenger (ﷺ) took hold of Aboo 'Ubaydah's hand and said: "This is the trusted man of this Ummah."[13]

If aahaad reports were not accepted with certainty, then the Prophet (ﷺ) would not have sent Aboo Ubaydah by himself to Yemen. The same can be said about other occasions when the Prophet (ﷺ) sent other companions, like 'Alee, Mu'aath and Aboo Moosaa al-Ash'aree, to Yemen and other provinces. There is no doubt that these emissaries of the Prophet (ﷺ) taught those who received them 'aqeedah along with other matters of the religion. If their reports were not accepted and were not a proof against those who received these Companions, the Prophet (ﷺ) would not have sent them one after another, as this would have been a wasted effort. The Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) would never fall into such a situation as this. And this is what Imaam ash-Shafi'ee meant when he said, in his book, ar-Risaalah: "The Prophet (ﷺ) would not send anyone carrying his instructions, unless the report of the one carrying the message was certain proof, either for or against those who received it. He could have sent for them and addressed them directly. Or he could have sent many Companions. Instead, he sent to them a single Companion who was known to be trustworthy.

[13] Saheeh Muslim and Saheeh Al-Bukhaaree

3. ‘Abdullaah ibn ‘Umar said: “While the inhabitants of Qubaa where praying Fajr, a man came to them and said: ‘[Verses of the] Qur’aan have been revealed to the Messenger (ﷺ) tonight, and he was ordered to face the Ka‘bah [during prayer], so face it.’ Their faces were towards Shaam, but they turned [their faces] towards Ka’bah.”[14]

This hadeeth is textual evidence that the Companions accepted the aahaad report that nullified facing Jerusalem during prayer… If they did not accept the aahaad report with certainty, why would they contradict what they knew for certain concerning their original prayer direction? Ibn al-Qayyim noted: “Furthermore, the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) did not criticize them. On the contrary, they were praised for this action.”

4. Sa‘eed ibn Jubayr related that he informed Ibn ‘Abbaas that Nawf al-Bakkali was claiming that Moses, the companion of al-Khidr, was not Moses of the Israelites. Ibn ‘Abbaas replied: “That enemy of Allaah has lied. Ubayy ibn Ka‘b informed me that the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) stood and said...” and he mentioned the hadeeth of Moses and al-Khidr in a way that proves that Moses [sent to the Children of Israel] was the same Moses who accompanied al-Khidr.[15]

Ash-Shaafi‘ee said: “Ibn ‘Abbaas, as knowledgeable and pious as he was, accepted the report by Ubayy ibn Ka‘b from the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ). He even called a Muslim a liar. This is because Ubayy ibn Ka‘b told him from the Prophet (ﷺ) what clearly indicates that Moses, who was sent to the Children of Israel, was the same one who accompanied al-Khidr.”

The above saying by Imaam ash-Shaafi‘ee is clear evidence that he did not differentiate between ‘aqeedah and laws with regards to aahaad reports. To decide whether Moses, of the Children of Israel, was the companion of al-Khidr or not, is a matter of the unseen and not a matter of laws and actions, as is evident. What further supports this conclusion, is that ash-Shaafi‘ee included an important chapter in his book, ar-Risaalah, entitled “Chapter: Evidence for the Necessity of Accepting the Aahaad Report.” In this chapter, he introduced many general proofs from the Qur’aan and the Sunnah which confirm that the aahaad report must also be accepted in matters of ‘aqeedah. Furthermore, the Imaam’s explanations of these proofs are general and include accepting hadeeth aahaad in matters of ‘aqeedah. He ended the chapter with the following statement: “There are many hadeeths, with regards to accepting the aahaad report. I have introduced sufficient evidence to this fact. This is the way of our Salaf, and the generations that followed, until our current generation. This is the [correct] way. Also, this [understanding] is what has been reported to us from scholars in other countries." The meaning of this statement is general enough to include the acceptance of aahaad reports in matters of 'aqeedah.

[14] Saheeh Al-Bukhaaree, and Saheeh Muslim.

[15] Saheeh Al-Bukhaaree and Saheeh Muslim.

Ash-Shaafi'ee also said: "If anyone were permitted to say that all Muslim scholars of the past and present, without exception, have agreed to accept the aahaad report and adhere to it, I would be the one to do so. However, I can only say: I do not know of any Muslim scholar who disagreed on the matter of accepting the aahaad report.' "[16]

Ibn al-Qayyim further said: "Some of them say: 'The major matters (usool) are matters concerning the unseen ('aqeedah), and the minor matters (furoo') are matters concerning laws.' This is, indeed, a false claim. Two basics are required in matters of laws: Knowledge [that Allaah revealed the law and made it obligatory] and adherence. The same basics are required for matters of the unseen. Adherence in matters of the unseen can be attained by the love, or hatred, felt by the heart. The heart must feel love for the truth that these reports of the unseen contain, and hatred for misguidance that opposes what they contain. Actions are not only required of the limbs. On the contrary, action taken by the limbs follows actions taken by the heart. Actions of the heart are the basis for actions performed by the limbs. All matters of the unseen require belief, acceptance and love felt in the heart for them. These are all actions of the heart and this is the basis of all actions of the limbs. This is a fundamental principle concerning matters of belief that so many people of Ahlul-Kalaam have ignored. They considered belief to consist of matters of acceptance but not matters of action!

The above error is a major mistake. Many disbelievers believed that the Prophet (ﷺ) was truthful and they did not doubt this fact. This belief, however, was not coupled with the actions that must be taken by the heart; loving what the Messenger (ﷺ) was sent with, accepting, approving and being loyal to it, and disassociation from those who defy it. Do not ignore this subject because it is very important, and, by knowing it, you will understand the essence of eemaan.

All matters of belief contain actions, and all matters of actions contain belief The Legislator [Allaah] did not require only the performance of actions without belief, nor did He require only the belief in matters of the unseen, without actions."

What we can understand from what Ibn al-Qayyim has explained above, is that differentiating between 'aqeedah and laws is false according to the consensus of scholars. It is false because it opposes the way of the Salaf and the meanings of the evidences I presented. It is also false because those who follow this methodology do not realize that belief is connected to action and actions are connected to belief. This is a very important matter that helps the believer to clearly understand this subject with certainty, and to refute the false principle of differentiation between 'aqeedah and laws.[17]

The aahaad hadeeths may be further subdivided into three main categories, Mash'hoor, 'Azeez and Ghareeb, according to the numbers of narrators at different levels of the chain.

A. Mash'hoor (well-known)

A narration that has a minimum of three or more transmitters in every level. The following hadeeth

((إِنَّ اللهَ لاَ يَقْبِضُ الْعِلْمَ انْتِزَاعًا يَنْتَزِعُهُ مِنْ الْعِبَادِ وَلَكِنْ يَقْبِضُ الْعِلْمَ بِقَبْضِ الْعُلَمَاءِ))

> "Allaah will not take away knowledge from people by snatching it, but by taking away the scholars."[18]

The mash'hoor is further explained as a hadeeth which is originally reported by one or more companions but has later become well-known and transmitted by an indefinite number of people. It is necessary that the diffusion of the report should have taken place during the first or the second generation (i.e. during the period of the Companions and the Successors) after the Prophet's death.

عَنْ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ بْنِ عَمْرِو بْنِ الْعَاصِ قَالَ سَمِعْتُ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يَقُولُ إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَا يَقْبِضُ الْعِلْمَ انْتِزَاعًا يَنْتَزِعُهُ مِنْ الْعِبَادِ وَلَكِنْ يَقْبِضُ الْعِلْمَ بِقَبْضِ الْعُلَمَاءِ حَتَّى إِذَا لَمْ يُبْقِ عَالِمًا اتَّخَذَ النَّاسُ رُءُوسًا جُهَّالًا فَسُئِلُوا فَأَفْتَوْا بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ فَضَلُّوا وَأَضَلُّوا

'Abdullaah ibn 'Amr ibn al-'Aas quoted Allaah's Messenger (ﷺ) as saying: "Allaah will not take away knowledge by snatching it, but by taking the scholars until none remains. People will then make ignorant people their leaders who, when consulted, will give verdicts without knowledge and thereby go astray and lead others astray." (Sahih Al-Bukhaari, vol. 1, p. 80, no. 100 and Sahih Muslim, vol. 4, p. 1404, no. 6462.)

For Aboo Haneefah and his followers, the mash'hoor hadeeth imparts positive knowledge (yaqeen), though of a lesser degree of certainty than the mutawaatir. But the majority of other jurists consider the mash'hoor to be included in the category of aahaad imparting only speculative knowledge (zann). According to Hanafites, acting on the mash'hoor is obligatory but its denial does not amount to disbelief.[19]

It should be noted that the term mash'hoor is also used to refer to popular hadeeths among scholars from various different fields that may or may not fulfill the technical requirements. For example, among legal scholars, the following hadeeth is commonly quoted:

((أَبْغَضُ الْحَلاَلِ إِلَى اللهِ الطَّلاَقُ))

"The most detestible of the halaal in Allaah's sight things is divorce."[20]

Among the outstanding books written on popular hadeeths is al-Maqaasid al-Hasanah by as-Sakhaawee, Kashf al-Khafaa by al-'Ajloonee and Tamyeez at-Tayyib minal-Khabeeth by ash-Shaybaanee.

B. 'Azeez (strong/rare)

A narration that has at least two transmitters in every level. Some scholars did not distinguish between mash'hoor and 'azeez. The following hadeeth is a good example of this type of narration:

((لاَ يُؤْمِنُ أَحَدُكُمْ حَتَّى أَكُونَ أَحَبَّ إِلَيْهِ مِنْ وَالِدِهِ وَوَلَدِهِ وَالنَّاسِ أَجْمَعِينَ))

"None of you truly believes until I become dearer to him than his parents, his children and all humankind."[21]

[20] Reported by az-Zubayr ibn 'Awwaam. The whole text is as follows:

حَدَّثَنَا كَثِيرُ بْنُ عُبَيْدٍ حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ خَالِدٍ عَنْ مُعَرِّفِ بْنِ وَاصِلٍ عَنْ مُحَارِبِ بْنِ دِثَارٍ عَنْ ابْنِ عُمَرَ عَنْ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ أَبْغَضُ الْحَلَالِ إِلَى اللَّهِ تَعَالَى الطَّلَاقُ

Katheer ibn 'Ubayd informed us from Muhammad ibn Khaalid, from Mu'arrif ibn Waasil, from Muhaarib ibn Dithaar, from Ibn 'Umar from the Prophet (ﷺ) that he said: "The most detestible of the halaal in Allaah Most High's sight things is divorce." (Sunan Abu Dawud, vol. 2, p. 586, no. 2173 and Sunan Ibn-i-Majah, vol., p., no.. and declared inauthentic in Da'eef Sunan Ibn Maajah, p. 155, no. 441.

This hadeeth was narrated from Anas ibn Maalik by Qataadah and ‘Abdul-‘Azeez ibn Suhayb. From Qataadah it was narrated by Shu‘bah and Sa‘eed and from ‘Abdul-‘Azeez by Ismaa‘eel ibn ‘Ulayyah and ‘Abdul-Waarith. Following that, many others narrated it.

Scholars did not produce any works dedicated to compiling ‘azeez narrations primarily because there was no significant benefit from such a compilation.

C. Ghareeb (strange): A narration which has a single transmitter at any point in the isnaad after the Companion - narrator.[22] Some scholars like Ibn Hajar used the term fard as a synonym for ghareeb, while others considered them to be separate classifications.

In accordance with the position of occurrence of the single narrator, the ghareeb is subdivided into two categories: Ghareeb Mutlaq and Ghareeb Nisbee.

1. Ghareeb Mutlaq* (Absolutely Single). This category is also known as Fard Mutlaq and it refers to a hadeeth in which the single narrator is at the beginning of the sanad, that is, the hadeeth is narrated by a single Companion from the Prophet (ﷺ). An example of such a narration is the well-known hadeeth of ‘Umar ibn al-Khattaab in which he quoted the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ) as saying:

((إِنَّمَا ٱلْأَعْمَالُ بِالنِّيَّاتِ))

“Indeed deeds are judged according to their intentions.”[23]

2. Ghareeb Nisbee* (Relatively Single). This category refers to a hadeeth which has a single narrator in the generations after the Companions. In other words, more than one Companion narrated it, but in a least one generation of narrators, it was related by a single narrator. An example of this type can be seen in the following narration:

حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ يُوسُفَ أَخْبَرَنَا مَالِكٌ عَنْ ابْنِ شِهَابٍ عَنْ أَنَسِ بْنِ مَالِكٍ رَضِيَ

Maalik from Ibn Shihaab from Anas ibn Maalik that the Messenger of Allaah entered [Makkah] in the year of the Conquest wearing a helmet. When he removed it, a man came and said that Ibn Khatal was clinging to the curtain of the Ka‘bah. He said: "Kill him."[24]

Imaam Maalik was the single narrator of this hadeeth from Ibn Shihaab az-Zuhree and he was from the generation of the students of the Successors.

The category of Ghareeb Nisbee may be applied to a hadeeth for a variety of other reasons.

a) A single narrator who is graded Thiqah (reliable)
b) A specific single narrator from another specific single narrator. Hadeeth scholars say: So-and-so is the sole narrator from so-and-so.
c) Single narrations from people of a specific town or region. Hadeeth scholars say: The sole narrators of this hadeeth are the people of Makkah or Syria.
d) Narrations by people of a specific area from other people of a specific area.

The most well-known text written on Ghareeb hadeeths is that of Imaam ad-Daaraqutnee called Gharaa'ib Maalik.

The Fiqh Value of Hadeeth Aahaad

With regard to the use of aahaad as evidence, Aboo Haneefah added the condition that the narrator's action should not contradict his narration. On the basis of this principle, Aboo Haneefah rejected the hadeeth of Aboo Hurayrah in which he quoted the Prophet (ﷺ) as saying, "If a dog licks one of your dishes, wash it seven times, one of which with clean earth."[25] Since the requirement of washing is normally three times, the report is considered weak, including its attribution to Aboo Hurayrah.[26] On the other hand, the majority of scholars took the view that discrepancies between the action and the report of a narrator may be due to forgetfulness or some other unknown factor. Discrepancies of this kind do not, by themselves, provide conclusive evidence to render the report unreliable.

Hanafite jurists further require that the subject matter of the aahaad is not such as to necessitate the knowledge of a vast number of people. Consequently, they reject the hadeeth that 'Anyone who touches his privates must make wudoo,'[27] arguing that if it was authentic; it would have become an established practice among all Muslims, which was not the case. The majority of jurists, however, do not insist on this requirement on the analysis that people who witness or observe an incident do not necessarily report it. For example, it is know that countless thousands of people saw the Prophet (ﷺ) performing Hajj, and yet not many reported their observations.[28]

Hanafites also maintain that when a narrator of aahaad is not a jurist (faqeeh), his report is accepted only if it agrees with qiyaas, otherwise qiyaas would be given priority over aahaad. On the other hand, if he were a jurist, his report would be give preference over qiyaas. As a result, Hanafite jurists reject the hadeeth of prohibiting musarraat[29]. The Prophet (ﷺ) said, "Do not retain milk in the udders of a she-camel or a goat so as to exaggerate its yield. Anyone who buys such an animal has the choice, for three days after milking it, either to keep it or to return it along with a saa' of dates."[30] Hanafite jurists regard this hadeeth to be contrary to qiyaas on the rule of equality between indemnity and loss, as the saa' of dates may not be equal to in value to the amount of milk the buyer consumed. The majority of scholars, including Maalik, ash-Shaafi'ee, Ibn Hanbal, and the students of Aboo Haneefah (Aboo Yoosuf and Zufar), on the other hand, accepted the hadeeth and given it priority over qiyaas.

Imaam Maalik would rely on the aahaad on condition that it did not contradict the practise of the Madeenites, because he considered the standard practise of the people of Madeenah to be more representative of the conduct of the Prophet (ﷺ) than an isolated report of one or two individuals. In his view, the Madeenite practice represented the narration of countless thousands of people from the Prophet (ﷺ). It was, in other words, equivalent to a mash'hoor or mutawaatir hadeeth. Consequently, Maalikite jurists rejected the option of cancellation (khiyaar al-majlis) which provides that "the parties to a sale are free to change their minds so long as they have not gone their separate ways,"[31] because this was contrary to the practice of the Madeenites.[32]

Hanafites rejected aahaad reports if they contradicted the obvious meanings of the Qur'aan. For example, the Prophet (ﷺ) said, "There is no prayer for whoever does not read the Faatihah." This hadeeth is authentic and is collected by al-Bukhaaree and Muslim. Followers of the Hanafee Math'hab rejected this hadeeth saying that it is in opposition to Allaah's statement:

﴿ فَاقْرَءُوا مَاتَيَسَّرَ مِنَ الْقُرْآنِ ﴾

> "So recite as much of the Qur'aan as may be easy for you." (Soorah al-Muzzammil, 73: 20).

However the leader of hadeeth scholars, Imaam al-Bukhaaree, said in the beginning of the "Chapter: Book on Reciting," that this hadeeth is a mutawaatir from the Messenger of Allaah (ﷺ).

In such a case, the Hanafites should have benefitted from the knowledge of this Imaam who specialized in hadeeth. They should have changed their ruling that this hadeeth is aahaad. They could have accepted this hadeeth, joined it with the Qur'aanic verse, and said that the hadeeth is restricting the general meaning of the Qur'aanic verse. This could be said, in spite of knowing that this Qur'aanic verse is actually about the voluntary prayer at night and not about what one must read in the compulsory prayer.[33]

EIGHT: Literature

The origins of the hadeeth literature can be traced back to the letters, laws and treaties that were dictated to scribes by the Prophet (ﷺ) himself. They are likewise to be traced back to numerous saheefahs (documents) which were compiled by the Companions and Successors, and to some of which reference was made earlier.

The discovery of the saheefahs of Hammaam ibn Munabbih, which has been published by Dr. Muhammad Hamidullah, reveals the nature and character of these saheefahs. It proves that they were more than simple memoranda, but were complete records of certain of the sayings of the Prophet (ﷺ), presented in the form familiar to us from the later collections of hadeeth.

The early sources of hadeeth fall into three distinct groups. Firstly, there were the books on maghaazee (almost synonymous with seerah) - such as those of Ibn Is'haaq and others - in which most of the hadeeths of a historical nature are to be found. Secondly, there were books on fiqh, such as the Muwatta of Imaam Maalik and the Kitaab al-Umm of Imaam al-Shaafi'ee, which contain a large number of legal hadeeths, cited in the context of legal discussions and mingled with rulings and practices of the Companions and their students. Finally, there are works that are strictly collections of hadeeth as such. It is these latter that will mostly be dealt with in this chapter.[1]

The Muwatta' of Maalik

Maalik ibn Anas ibn 'Aamir, was born in Madeenah in the year 717 CE. His grandfather, 'Aamir, was among the major Sahaabah of Madeenah. Maalik studied Hadeeth under az-Zuhree who was the greatest hadeeth scholar of his time, as well as under the great hadeeth narrator, Naafi', the freed slave of the Sahabee 'Abdullaah ibn 'Umar. Maalik's only journeys outside of Madeenah were for Hajj, and thus he largely limited himself to the knowledge available in Madeenah. He was severely beaten in the year 764 CE by the order of the Ameer of Madeenah, because he made a legal ruling that forced divorce was invalid. This ruling opposed the 'Abbasid rulers' practice of adding in the oath of allegiance given to them by the masses the clause that whoever broke the oath was automatically divorced.

[1] Hadith Literature, pp. 71-3.

Imaam Maalik continued to teach hadeeth in Madeenah over a period of forty years and he managed to compile a book containing hadeeths of the Prophet (ﷺ) and rulings of the Sahaabah and their successors which he named al-Muwatta' (the Beaten Path). He began his compilation of hadeeths at the request of the 'Abbaasid caliph, Aboo Ja'far al-Mansoor (754-755 CE) who wanted a comprehensive code of law based on the Prophet's (ﷺ) Sunnah which could be applied uniformly throughout his realm. But, on its completion, Maalik refused to have it forced on the people pointing out that the Sahaabah had scattered throughout the Islamic empire and had taken with them other parts of the Sunnah which also had to be considered in any laws imposed throughout the state. Caliph Haaroon ar-Rasheed (768-809 CE) also made the same request of the Imaam, but he was also turned down. Imaam Malik died in the city of his birth in the year 801 CE at the venerable age of 83.[2]

Imaam Maalik's method of teaching was based on the narration of hadeeths and the discussion of their meanings in the context of problems of that day. He would either narrate to his students hadeeths and statements of the Sahaabah on various topics of Islaamic law then discuss their implications, or he would inquire about problems which had arisen in the areas from whence his students came, then narrate appropriate hadeeths or athars which could be used to solve them.

After Maalik completed al-Muwatta', he used to narrate it to his students as the sum total of his Math'hab, but would add or subtract from it slightly, whenever new information reached him.[3] Consequently, there were more than 80 versions of his compilation. Fifteen of them are most famous and now only one version, that of Yahyaa ibn Yahyaa, is available in its original form, complete and printed.

The most famous commentaries are by Ibn 'Abdil-Birr who compiled two commentaries: at-Tamheed and al-Istithkaar. Muhammad Zakariyaa al-Kandhalawi wrote Awjaz al-Masaalik Sharh Muwatta Imaam Maalik which was published in India and Egypt.[4]

THE MUSNADS

Of all the various types of large hadeeth collections, the musnads appear to be the earliest in origin. Yet many of those which are generally ascribed to certain of the early authorities on hadeeth were in fact compiled by later traditionists. They collected hadeeths which were related to them by, or on the authority of, a single important narrator. Such are the Musnads of Aboo Haneefah, al-Shaafi‘ee, ‘Umar ibn ‘Abdil-‘Azeez, and others, none of whom is in reality known to have compiled a musnad work. The Musnad which is generally known as that of Aboo Haneefah was compiled by Abul-Mu’ayyad Muhammad ibn Mahmood al-Khwaarizmee (d. 1257). The Musnad of al-Shaafi’ee was compiled on the basis of his Kitaab al-Umm and al-Mabsoot by Muhammad ibn Ya‘qoob al-Asamm (d. 860). The work known as the Musnad of Umar ibn ‘Abdil-‘Azeez was compiled by al-Baaghandee (d. 895). The Musnad of Aboo Daawood at-Tayaalisee, which is considered to be the earliest musnad still extant, was not compiled in its present form by at-Tayaalisee himself, but by a traditionist working in Khurasaan at a later date.

The Musnad of at-Tayaalisee

An old, rare and important manuscript of this work is preserved in the Oriental Public Library of Patna, and has been fully described by Maulawi ‘Abdul-Hameed in the catalogue of the hadeeth MSS kept at the O.P. Library at Bankipore. The Hyderabad edition of the musnad has been published on the basis of this manuscript.

Aboo Dawood Sulaymaan ibn Daawood ibn al-Jaarood at-Tayaalisee, to whom the Musnad is generally ascribed, was of Persian origin, and was born in the year 750-1 CE. He studied traditions with more than a thousand scholars of his day, among whom many prominent names stand out, including Shu‘bah (in whose traditions at-Tayaalisee seems to have specialized), Sufyaan ath-Thawree, and others. He had a sharp, retentive memory, and is said to have dictated forty thousand traditions without the help of notes. During his lifetime he came to be accepted as an outstanding authority on hadeeth, and especially on the long hadeeths, so that students flocked to him from all corners of the Islamic world. His teacher Shu‘bah, having heard him discuss certain traditions with his students, confessed that he himself could not do better. Strict traditionists like Ibn Hambal and ‘Alee ibn al-Madeenee, accepted at-Tayaalisee’s authority, and related traditions from him; yet he was none the less not above criticism from some experts, who believed that his memory sometimes failed him. He died in the year 813 at the age of 70.

In the present printed edition of the Musnad, the work consists of 2,767 traditions related by 281 Companions, whose material is given under their names, which are arranged in the following order: (i) the Four Caliphs (ii) the rest of those who fought at Badr (iii) the Emigrants (iv) the Ansaar (v) the women (vi) the youngest Companions. However, at-Tayaalisee, to whom the work is generally ascribed, neither compiled it nor arranged it in its present form. It is rather the work of his student, Yoonus ibn Habeeb, who collected together the traditions which he had received from his teacher and arranged them as he saw fit.

The subject matters of the traditions contained in the Musnad are as varied and numerous as those of any other collection of hadeeth. But those relating to miracles, the personal or tribal virtues of the Companions, and prophecies of future events or sects in Islam, are very few.

The book appears to have enjoyed great popularity until the eighth Islamic century. The Patna manuscript alone bears the names of more than 300 male and female students of hadeeth, who had read it at different periods. Among them are found the names of great traditionists such as ath-Thahabee, al-Mizzee, and others.[30] After the eighth century, for whatever reason, it lost its popularity - so much so that manuscripts of the book have become extremely rare.

The Musnad of Ahmad ibn Hanbal

The most important and exhaustive of all the musnad works available to us is that of Imaam Ahmad ibn Muhammad ibn Hambal al-Marwazee ash-Shaybaanee. His remarkably austere, selfless life, and his firm stand for his convictions against the tyrannical inquisition and persecution launched by al-Ma'moon, and continued by al-Waathiq and al-Mutawakkil, created a halo of sanctity around his great collection of traditions. Despite its great bulk, it survived the vicissitudes of time, and was printed at Cairo in 1896.[5]

Ibn Hambal was descended from the Arab Shaybaanee tribe. He was born in Marw, where his father had gone for the purpose of Jihaad in 780 CE and was carefully brought up by his pious mother, Safiyyah bint Maymoonah in Baghdad. His father died at the age of 30, while Ahmad was quite young.[6] He received his early education from the leading scholars of the region, and began the serious study of hadeeth at the age of 15 under Ibraaheem ibn 'Ulayyah. After studying with all the major hadeeth experts of the capital, he began to travel in search of knowledge in 799. He wandered through Basra, Kufa, the Yemen, the Hijaaz, and other centres of hadeeth learning, attending the lectures of the traditionists, taking notes, and discussing them with scholars and fellow students. He finally returned to Baghdad in 810, where he met Imaam al-Shaafi'ee and with whom he studied fiqh and usool al-fiqh.

Ibn Hambal began lecturing on traditions from an early age. It is said that a large number of students flocked around him in order to hear his lectures on hadeeth in a Baghdad mosque in the year 804, when he went there for a short time.[397] He made the service and teaching of the Prophet's message the sole object of his life, and continued doing that until 833, when a storm of persecution erupted against the orthodox theologians throughout the 'Abbaasid empire.

Caliph al-Ma'moon, under the influence of his philosophically - minded associates, publicly accepted the Mu'tazilite creed, including the notion that the Qur'aan was created. When most scholars refused to join him in his conversion, he first threatened, and then persecuted them. Many scholars, including Imaam Ahmad, refused to yield. The Caliph, who was then at Tarsus, ordered that they should be put in chains and sent to him. Although these orders were carried out, al-Ma'moon died before his devout prisoners had reached their destination. This, however, proved of little help to them. The Caliph had made a will wherein he asked his successor to carry out his wishes with regard to the propagation of the doctrine on the creation of the Qur'aan. His two immediate successors, al-Mu'tasim and al-Waathiq, fiercely carried out this policy, not hesitating to use torture and incarceration to persuade the Muslim scholars of the correctness of the Mu'tazilite system. This mihnah (persecution) continued with varying vigour until the third year of the reign of al-Mutawakkil, who, in the year 848, finally put a stop to it and returned to mainstream Sunni belief.[8]

Some of the great traditionists, like Yahyaa ibn Ma'een and 'Alee ibn al-Madeenee, sought refuge behind the veil of taqeeyah (dissimulation). It was Ahmad ibn Hanbal who at this critical juncture proved to be the saviour of Orthodoxy and the Islamic principle of the freedom of faith and conscience. He refused to submit to the dictates of the caliph. Instead he exposed the fallacies in the reasoning of his adversaries in public debates, and refused to be buckle under their threats of force. He patiently endured their persecutions and was kept in a cell for eighteen months, where he was regularly whipped by a team of executioners until his wrist was broken, he was badly wounded, and he lost consciousness. On one occasion when he regained consciousness and was offered water, he refused it saying that he did not want to break his fast.[9] None the less, he kept his conscience whole, and emerged from the test with the greatest credit. Even more impressively, in the eyes of the community, Ibn Hambal showed exemplary generosity towards his enemies and persecutors, against none of whom he showed any ill will. He scrupulously refrained from expressing any opinion against Ahmad ibn Abee Du'aad, who had taken the part of chief inquisitor against him during the mihnah.[10]

After the mihnah was over, Imaam Ahmad lived for about eight years. Most of this period, he devoted to teaching, while the rest he spent in prayers and the remembrance of God. He died in 855, at the age of 77. His funeral was attended by a vast crowd, said to have contained between 600,000 and two and a half million people. It was an event the like of which must rarely have been witnessed anywhere.[11]

Throughout his life Ibn Hambal inspired those who knew him with his pious character. He boycotted his sons, Saalih and 'Abdullaah, because they had accepted stipends from the caliph. He hated luxury, and met his few needs from what he himself earned. Though in his religious beliefs he was extremely firm and principled, yet by nature he was very gentle and anxious not to cause harm to anyone. Honesty and justice were the most admired elements of his character.[12]

With the exclusion of part of his final years, Imaam Ahmad devoted his entire life to the service of hadeeth, spreading it through the large regiments of his students to every part of the Muslim world, and writing about various theological problems by presenting the relevant proof-texts from the Qur'aan and the Sunnah. Thirteen of these books are mentioned by Ibn an-Nadeem in his Fihrist, while others, such as Kitaab as-Salaah, have also been published in his name.

The most important of his works is without question the Musnad. The period of its compilation is unknown; but it is clear from its structure as well as its contents that it must have occupied its compiler's mind for a long time. His main object was to collect all the traditions of the Prophet (ﷺ) which, by his criteria, were likely to prove genuine if put to the test, and could therefore serve as a provisional basis for argument. He never claimed that all its contents were genuine or reliable. On the contrary, he struck off many traditions from his book; and even when he was on his deathbed, he asked his son to delete a hadeeth from the Musnad.

To assemble his work, Ibn Hambal drew from his own vast store of knowledge, as well as the entire literature available to him on the subject. Out of some 750,000 narrations he sifted 30,000 traditions narrated by 904 Companions on a wide variety of subjects, such as maghaazee, manaaqib, rituals, laws, prophecies, and so forth. He dictated the various parts of his hadeeth notes to his students, and also to his sons and nephew over a period of 13 years. Although he had wanted to assemble his notes in the form of a Musnad, death overtook him, so that the task of arranging the material fell to his son ‘Abdullaah, who edited his father’s notes.[13]

Ibn Hambal was not strict in the choice of his materials and authorities. He included in his notes material which could not by any definition be included as hadeeth. Many of the traditions contained in the Musnad were later declared by traditionists of a later period to be baseless and forged (mawdoo‘), and many of the narrators relied upon by Ibn Hambal are declared by the authorities on asmaa ar-rijaal to be of dubious worth. Most famous of these is ‘Abdullaah ibn Lahee‘ah (715-790), over whose credentials a lively controversy continues to rage.

There are, however, many virtues in Ibn Hambal’s work. If he receives a hadeeth from more than one narrator, he pointed out the slightest difference that may exist between them.

Ibn Hambal’s son, ‘Abdullaah (Aboo Abdir-Rahmaan), maintained the scrupulous care and thoroughness of his father when editing the material he inherited. He collated the whole of his father’s huge but incomplete manuscript with his own notes, which he had taken at his lectures and at the sessions of other traditionists. He also collated it with what he had learnt from him and others during more general learned discussions.[14]

Ibn Hambal’s Musnad occupies an important place in hadeeth literature, and has served as an important source for various writers on the different genres of Arabic literature. Of the numerous scholars and authors who used the Musnad as a subject for their commentary or adaptations, or as a source for their own works or compilations, we may mentioned here just a few. Aboo ‘Umar Muhammad ibn Waahid (d. 956) re-edited the book and added certain supplementary traditions. Al-Baawartee, the lexicographer (d. 1155), based his Ghareeb al-Hadeeth entirely on this book. ‘Izzud-Deen ibn al-Atheer (d. 1234) used it as one of his sources for his biographical dictionary, the Usud al-Ghaabah. Ibn Hajar (d. 1505) included it among the important works upon which he based his Atraaf. Siraajud-Deen ‘Umar ibn al-Mulaqqin (d. 1402) made a synopsis of it. As-Suyootee (d. 1505) used it as the basis for his grammatical treatise, ‘Uqood al-Zabarjad. Abul-Hasan ‘Umar ibn al-Haadee as-Sindee (d. 1726) wrote a large commentary on it and Zaynud-Deen ‘Umar ibn Ahmad ash-Shammaa al-Halabee made a selection from it, which he called al-Muntaqaa min Musnad Ahmad. Aboo Bakr Muhammad ibn ‘Abdillaah re-edited it, arranging the traditions in the alphabetical order of the names of their original narrators. Naasirud-Deen ibn Zurayq prepared another edition of it in the form of a Musannaf, while Abul-Hasan al-Haythamee gathered its traditions which were not found in the six canonical compilations.[15]

Other Musnad Works

Like at-Tayaalisee and Ibn Hambal, many other traditionists compiled musnad works along the same lines, with certain differences in the details of internal structure. These include Aboo Muhammad ‘Abdul-Hameed ibn Humayd (d. 863), Aboo ‘Awaanah (d. 929), Ibn Abee Shaybah (d. 849), Is’haaq ibn Raahawayh (d. 852), al-Humaydee (d. 834), Aboo Ya‘laa (d. 919), and others.

THE MUSANNAF WORKS

Still more important than the Musnad works are the collections known as Musannaf. To this genre belong the most important of all hadeeth collections, such as the Saheehs of al-Bukhaaree and Muslim, the Jaami‘ of at-Tirmithee, and also the Sunan works such as those of an-Nasaa’ee and Aboo Daawood. The early musannaf works are mostly lost. The Musannaf of Waaki‘ (d. 812 CE), for instance, is known to us only through references in later works. [16]

The Musannaf of ‘Abdur-Razzaaq

The earliest Musannaf work in existence is the Musannaf of Aboo Bakr ‘Abdur-Razzaaq ibn Humaam (743 - 826), of San‘aa in Yemen, which has been skillfully edited and published by the Indian scholar Habeebur-Rahmaan al-A‘zamee.

‘Abdur-Razzaaq began his study of hadeeth at the age of twenty. He stayed in the company of Ma‘mar for seven years, learning hadeeth from him, and studied under other leading authorities such as Ibn Jurayj, until he himself became one of the most outstanding hadeeth experts in his day. Many later authorities acknowledge their debt to him, including traditionists like Yahyaa ibn Ma‘een and Ahmad ibn Hambal. It is said that after the death of the Prophet (ﷺ), people never travelled in such a large number to meet anyone as they did to ‘Abdur-Razzaaq. His compilation was divided in accordance with the fiqh classification into various books, in each of which the hadeeths are distributed according to subject.

The final chapter is on Shamaa'il, and the very last hadeeth is about the Prophet's hair.[17]

The Musannaf of Ibn Abee Shaybah

The Musannaf of Aboo Bakr Muhammad ibn 'Abdillaah ibn Abee Shaybah (d. 849 CE) is even more exhaustive than that of 'Abdur-Razaaq. His grandfather worked as judge of Wasit during the reign of al-Mansoor, and his family produced many traditionists. Based at Kufa, he himself related traditions to leading figures such as Aboo Zar'ah, al-Bukhaaree, Muslim, and Ahmad ibn Hambal. His Musannaf, which is considered an early source of the first importance, has recently been printed in thirteen volumes.[18]

The Saheeh of Al-Bukhaaree

The most important of all Musannaf works, indeed, of all the hadeeth collections, is of course al-Jaami' as-Saheeh of al-Bukhaaree. The compiler is said to have questioned more than a thousand hadeeth scholars, who lived in places as far apart as Balkh, Merv, Nishapur, the Hijaaz, Egypt and Iraq. Al-Bukhaaree used to seek aid in prayer before recording every tradition, and weighed every word he wrote with scrupulous exactitude. He devoted more than a quarter of his life to the creation of his Saheeh, which is generally considered by the Muslims as an authority second only to the Qur'aan.

Aboo 'Abdullaah Muhammad ibn Ismaa'eel al-Bukhaaree, who was born at Bukhara in the year 810 CE, was of Persian origin. His ancestor, Bardizbah, was a farmer in the vicinity of Bukhara, who was taken captive during the Muslim conquest of the region. Bardizbah's son, who took the name al-Mugheerah, accepted Islaam at the hand of al-Yamaan al-Ju'fee, the Muslim governor of Bukhara, and gained from him the surname "al-Ju'fee." Al-Mugheerah's son Ibraahim, the grandfather of our author, had a son called Ismaa'eel, who became a traditionist of great piety and sound reputation. He studied under a number of famous scholars of hadeeth such as Maalik ibn Anas, Hammaad ibn Zayd and Ibn al-Mubaarak. [19] Scrupulous in his habits, he is said to have mentioned on his deathbed that in all he possessed there was not a penny that had not been earned by his own honest labour.

Like many scholars of his time, al-Bukhaaree began his educational career under the guidance of his mother in his native city. Finishing his elementary studies at the young age of eleven, he immersed himself in the study of hadeeth. Within six years he had mastered the knowledge of all the traditionists of Bukhara, as well as everything contained in the books that were available to him. Al-Bukhaaree not only memorized the hadeeths in the books of the scholars, he also memorized the biographies of all the narrators in their chains of narrators, their dates and places of birth, death, etc. He then travelled to Makkah with his mother and brother in order to perform the Pilgrimage. From the Holy City, he started a series of journeys in quest of hadeeth, passing through all the important centres of Islamic learning, staying in each place as long as he needed, meeting the traditionists, learning all the hadeeth they knew, and communicating his own knowledge to them. It is recorded that he stayed at Basra for four or five years, and in the al-Hijaaz for six. He also travelled to Egypt twice and to Kufa and Baghdad many times.[20]

Imaam Bukhaaree's travels continued for some four decades. In the year 864, he came to the great Central Asian city of Nishapur, where he was given a grand reception suitable to a traditionist of his rank. Here he devoted himself to the teaching of tradition, and wished to settle down. But he was obliged to leave the town due to the rivalry of the traditionalist, Muhammad ibn Yahyaa ath-Thuhalee, when he refused to accept a request to deliver lectures on hadeeth at the palace of Khaalid ibn Ahmad ath-Thuhalee. From Nishapur he travelled on to Khartank, a village near Bukhara, at the request of its inhabitants. Here he settled down, and died in the year 870.[21]

Throughout his life, al-Bukhaaree displayed the character of a pious Muslim scholar. He was rigorous in the observance of his religious duties, and he earned his livelihood by means of trade, in which he was scrupulously honest. A good deal of his income, in fact, was spent on helping the students and the poor. It is said that he never showed an ill-temper to anyone, even when there was more than sufficient cause; nor did he bear ill-will against anybody. Even towards those who had caused his exile from Nishapur, he harboured no grudge.[22]

Since the very outset of his career, al-Bukhaaree showed the signs of greatness. It is said that at the age of eleven he pointed out a mistake of one of his teachers. The teacher laughed at the audacity of the young student; but al-Bukhaaree persisted in his correction, and challenged his teacher to refer to his book, which justified the pupil's contention.

On many occasions al-Bukhaaree's learning was put to severe tests, of a kind often favoured by rigorous scholars of the time, and he seems always to have emerged with credit. At Baghdad, ten traditionists changed the isnaads and contents of a hundred hadeeths, recited them to al-Bukhaaree at a public meeting, and asked him questions about them. Al-Bukhaaree first confessed his ignorance of the traditions that they had recited. But then he recited the correct versions of all the traditions concerned, and said that probably his questioners had inadvertently recited them wrongly. At Samarqand, four hundred students tested al-Bukhaaree's knowledge in the same way, and al-Bukhaaree succeeded in exposing their interpolations. These repeated trials and triumphs of al-Bukhaaree won him recognition as the greatest traditionist of his time by all the major authorities with whom he came in contact, including Ahmad ibn Hambal, 'Alee ibn al-Madeenee, Aboo Bakr ibn Abee Shaybah, Is'haaq ibn Raahawayh, and others.[23]

Al-Bukhaaree's writings began during his stay in Medina at the age of 18, when he compiled his earliest two books. One of these contained the decrees and judgements of the Companions and the Successors, while the other was made up of short biographies of the important narrators of traditions during his own lifetime. A large number of other collections followed; a list is furnished by his biographers Muqaddimah Fat'h al-Baaree and Irshaad as-Saaree, as well as the Fihrist.

The Saheeh, known commonly as Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, is the most important of his books. It is said to have been heard by 90,000 of the author's students, and is considered by almost all traditionists to be the most reliable collection of hadeeth.[24]

Bukhaaree got the idea to compile the Saheeh from a casual remark made by Is'haaq ibn Raahawayh (782-852), who said that he wished that a traditionist would compile a short but comprehensive book containing only genuine traditions. These words seem to have fired al-Bukhaaree's imagination, and he set to work with indefatigable energy and care. He sifted through all the traditions known to him, tested their genuineness according to canons of criticism he himself developed, selected 9,082 out of some 600,000 narrations of hadeeths. If repetitions are excluded, the actual number of hadeeths goes down to 2,062.[25] He arranged them according to their subject matter under separate headings, most of which are taken from the Qur'aan, and in some cases from the traditions themselves.

[25] Studies in Hadith Methodology, p. 89.

Because al-Bukhaaree nowhere mentions what canons of criticism he applied to the traditions to test their genuineness, or tells us why he compiled the book, many later scholars have tried to infer these things from the text itself. Al-Haazimee, in his Shuroot al-A'immah, al-'Iraaqee in his Alfiyyah, al-'Aynee and al-Qastallaanee in their introductions to their commentaries on the Saheeh, and many other writers on the hadeeth sciences, including Ibn as-Salaah, have tried to deduce Bukhaaree's principles from the material he presents.[26]

Al-Bukhaaree's main object was to collect together the sound traditions only. Al-Bukhaaree includes in his work the narrations of narrators when they explicitly state that they had received the traditions from their own authorities. If their statement in this regard was ambiguous, he took care that they had demonstrably met their teachers, and were not known for careless statements. However, it would be a mistake, to suppose that the Saheeh is absolutely free of defects. In estimating the reliability of the narrators, his judgment has in certain cases been incorrect, and the Muslim traditionists have pointed this out. Ad-Daaraqutnee (918-995) tried to show the weakness of some two hundred traditions contained in the book, in his work al-Istidraak wat-Tatabbu', which has been summarised by al-Jazaa'iree in his Tawjeeh an-Nazar.[27] According to as-Suyootee, criticism concerns some 80 narrators and 110 hadeeths. The criticism showed that though these hadeeths were not mistaken or false, they did not measure up to the high standard which al-Bukhaaree had set.[28] For example, at-Tirmithee said: "The hadeeths of Ibn Abee Laylaa cannot be used as evidence. Muhammad ibn Ismaa'eel said: 'Ibn Abee Laylaa is Sadooq (truthful).' However, I don't narrate from him because he doesn't know his authentic narrations from his weak ones, and anyone like that I don't narrate from."[29] Aboo Mas'ood of Damascus, and Aboo 'Alee al-Ghassaanee have also criticised some of the narrations in the Saheeh, while al-'Aynee in his celebrated commentary has shown the defects of some of its contents.

The Saheeh of Muslim

The position of Bukhaaree's Saheeh in the literature is not, unrivalled. Another Saheeh was being compiled almost simultaneously, which was considered its superior by some, its equal by others, and second to it by most. This was the Saheeh of Muslim ibn al-Hajjaaj ibn Muslim of the Arab Qushayree clan from Nishapur.

Very little is known about Muslim's early life. It is said that he was born in 817, and that having learnt and excelled in the usual disciplines at a precocious age, focussed his attention on hadeeth. In its pursuit he travelled widely, visiting all the important centres of learning in Persia, Iraq, Syria and Egypt. He attended the lectures of most of the great traditionists of his day, including Is'haaq ibn Raahawayh, Ahmad ibn Hambal, 'Ubaydulalah al-Qawaareeree, Shuwayh ibn Yoonus, 'Abdullaah ibn Maslamah, and Hamalah ibn Yahyaa. He settled down at Nishapur, earning a living from a small business, and devoted the remainder of his time to the service of the Prophetic sunnah. He died in the year 874.

His character is said to have been admirable. His fearless loyalty to the truth is shown by his persistence in associating with al-Bukhaaree while others had deserted him on account of Muhammad ibn Yahyaa ath-Thuhalee's accusations.[30]Like Bukhaaree, too, he wrote a good number of books and treatises on hadeeth, and on related subjects. Ibn al-Nadeem mentions five books by him on the subject. Haajjee Khaleefah adds the names of many other works by him in the same field. In his Saheeh he examined a third of a million hadeeths, from which he selected only about four thousand, which the traditionists unanimously regarded as sound.

Like al-Bukhaaree, Muslim regarded a hadeeth as Saheeh only when it had been handed down to him through a continuous isnaad of known and reliable authorities, was compatible with other material established in this way, and was free from various types of deficiency. He adopted a threefold classification of hadeeths.

Firstly, there were those which had been related by narrators who were straight forward and steadfast in their narrations, did not differ much in them from other reliable narrators, and did not commit any palpable confusion in their reports.

Secondly, there were traditions whose narrators were not distinguished for their retentive memory and steadfastness in narrations.

Thirdly, there were the hadeeths narrated on the authority of people whom all or most traditionists declared were of questionable reliability. According to Imaam Muslim, the first group makes up the bulk of his book; the second is included as corroborative of the first, while the third is entirely rejected.[31]

Upon completing his Saheeh, Imaam Muslim presented it to Aboo Zar'ah of Rayy, a traditionist of great repute, for his comments. Aboo Zar'ah inspected it closely, and Muslim deleted everything which he thought was defective, and retained only such traditions as were declared by him to be genuine.

Thus carefully compiled by Muslim, and proof-read by Aboo Zar'ah, the Saheeh has been acclaimed as the most authentic collection of traditions after that of al-Bukhaaree, and superior to the latter in the details of its arrangement. Some traditionists hold it to be superior to the work of al-Bukhaaree in every respect.

After Muslim, a number of other scholars also compiled Saheeh collections. These include Ibn Khuzaymah (d. 925), Aboo Haatim Muhammad ibn Hibban (d. 965), and others.[32] None of them, however, ever gained the recognition and popularity that the Muslim community has accorded the definitive achievements of al-Bukhaaree and Muslim. [33]

THE SUNAN WORKS

The Sunan works constitute the richest branch of hadeeth literature. Since the earliest period of Islaam, the traditionists attached greater importance to legal and doctrinal reports than they did to accounts of a historical (maghaazee) nature, arguing that the precise date of the Prophet's departure from Badr, for instance, was of no practical utility for a Muslim. They felt that attention should instead be focussed on topics of relevance to a Muslim's daily life, such as ablutions, prayers, sales, marriages, etc.

This emphasis on hadeeths of a practical nature grew even more pronounced after the second half of the third century. Most of the traditionists compiled hadeeth collections of the sunan alone. Such are the works of Aboo Daawood as-Sijistaanee, at-Tirmithee, an-Nasaa'ee, al-Daarimee, Ibn Maajah, al-Daaraqutnee, and a considerable number of others.[34]

The Sunan of Aboo Daawood

This work, which is among the most important of the hadeeth anthologies, is the work of Aboo Daawood Sulaymaan ibn al-Ash'ath al-Sijistaanee, who is said to have examined 500,000 hadeeths, and selected 4,800 for his book, a labour which occupied him for twenty years in Tarsus.[35]

Aboo Daawood was a descendant of ‘Imraan of the Azd tribe, who was killed during the Battle of Siffeen on the side of ‘Alee. Aboo Daawood himself was born in 817 in the well-known region of Sijistaan in Khurasan.

When his elementary education was complete, he joined a school in Nishapur at the age of ten. There he studied under Muhammad ibn Aslam (d. 856). He then travelled to Basra, where he received the bulk of his hadeeth training. In 838 he visited Kufa, and from there he began a series of journeys in search of hadeeth, which took him to the Hijaaz, Iraq, Persia, Syria and Egypt. He met most of the foremost traditionists of his time, and acquired from them a profound knowledge of the traditions which were available.[36]

Aboo Daawood’s travels regularly took him to the metropolis of Baghdad. Once, while staying in that city, he was visited by Aboo Ahmad al-Muwaffaq, the celebrated commander and brother of the Caliph al-Mu‘tamid. When Aboo Daawood enquired as to the purpose of his visit, al-Muwaffaq replied that his objective was threefold. Firstly, he wished to invite Aboo Daawood to reside at Basra, which had become deserted on account of the Zanj insurrection, in the hope that it would be repopulated if famous scholars and their students moved there.[37] Secondly, he requested Aboo Daawood to give classes to his family. Thirdly, he asked him to make these classes private, so that ordinary students would be excluded. Aboo Daawood accepted the first two requests, but expressed his inability to comply with the third. In his view all were equal regarding knowledge, and Aboo Daawood would not tolerate any distinction between rich and poor students. The result was that al-Muwaffaq’s sons attended his lectures side by side with anyone else that wished to attend.

This anecdote, preserved for us by as-Subkee, throws light not just on the great reputation enjoyed by Aboo Daawood as a scholar and a man of principle, but also on the date of his final settlement at Basra. This is unlikely to have occurred before the year 883, when the Zanj insurrection was finally crushed. Aboo Daawood died at Basra in the year 888, at the age of 73.[38]

He was noted for his encyclopaedic knowledge of traditions, his photographic memory, his upright character, and his kindness. One of his most celebrated books on traditions and Sacred Law is his Sunan, which is not only regarded as the first work of its type in the hadeeth literature, but is generally seen as the best and most reliable. It is divided into books, which are subdivided into chapters.[39]

Although Aboo Daawood retained the scrupulous exactitude of his predecessors in reproducing the material which he collected, he differed from them in the criteria of selection. In his Sunan, he included not only the Saheeh traditions, but also some other accounts that had been classed by other scholars as weak or doubtful. Among the narrators, he relied not only on those who had been unanimously declared acceptable, but also on others who were the subject of criticism. In his opinion, a weak hadeeth – if not very weak, was better than the personal opinion of the scholars.[40] This was not necessarily a defect in his book as some critics such as Shu'bah had in fact been over strict in their criticisms of the narrators. None the less, Aboo Daawood collected the most reliable traditions known to him on every subject of fiqh, quoting the sources through which the traditions had reached him, together with the various versions of the accounts in question. He draws attention to the defects of certain of the traditions he cites, as well as the relative value of the variant texts. In the case of the traditions which he believed to be genuine, however, he makes no comments whatsoever; he also often took only those parts of long hadeeths which were relevant to the chapter in which they were included.

The following remarks made by Aboo Daawood in connection with some of his traditions give us a general idea of the method and nature of his criticism:

"Aboo Daawood says: This is an inauthentic (munkar) hadeeth. Certainly, it is related by Ibn Jurayj from Ziyaad ibn Sa'd, from az-Zuhree, from Anas, that he said that the Prophet (ﷺ), had put on a ring made of palm-leaf, which he in time discarded.

The mistake in this hadeeth is to be attributed to Humaam as no other narrator has related it."[41]

And in connection with a further hadeeth, after giving two versions of it, he remarks: "The account related by Anas is more correct than the other."[42]

Since the author collected traditions which no-one else had ever assembled together, it has been accepted as a standard work by scholars of a wide variety of schools, particularly in Iraq, Egypt, North Africa and many other parts of the Islamic world.[43] Sunan Abee Daawood is the most comprehensive of the Sunan with regard to legal hadeeths.[44]

Many commentaries have been written on the book, and the best one available is that of Shamsul-Haq 'Azeemaabaadee, 'Awn al-Ma'bood Sharh Sunan Abee Daawood. Another very important work has been published under the title Tah'theeb Sunan Abee Daawood edited by Ahmad Shaakir and others in 8 volumes in Cairo. It contains the books of Munthiree and Ibn al-Qayyim.[45]

The Sunan of At-Tirmithee

The general principles with regard to the criticism of hadeeth which had been adopted by Aboo Daawood were further improved upon and followed by his student Aboo 'Eesaa Muhammad ibn 'Eesaa ibn Sawrah ibn Moosaa ad-Dahhaak at-Tirmithee, in his compilation which he called al-Jaami'. This work contains the bulk of the traditions - legal, theological, and historical - that had been accepted by the jurists of the main juridical tendencies as the basis of Islamic law.

At-Tirmithee was born at Makkah in the year 821. He travelled a good deal in search of traditions, visiting the great centres of Islaamic learning in Iraq, Persia and Khurasan, where he was able to associate with eminent traditionists such as al-Bukhaaree, Muslim, Aboo Daawood and others. He returned to his hometown in the province of Khurasan in 862 and compiled his Jaami' after that. It was completed some twenty years later. Aboo 'Eesaa died at Tirmith in 892.[46]

Like Aboo Daawod, at-Tirmithee possessed a remarkably sharp and retentive memory, which was severely tested many times. It is related that during an early stage of his travels, a traditionist once dictated to him several traditions which occupied sixteen pages, which, however, were lost by at-Tirmithee before he could revise them. He met the traditionist again after some time, and requested him to recite some traditions. The teacher suggested that he would read out from his manuscript the same traditions that he had dictated to at-Tirmithee during their previous meeting, and that at-Tirmithee should compare his notes with what he heard. Instead of telling the traditionist that he had misplaced his notes, at-Tirmithee picked up some blank sheets of paper in his hand, and looked into them as though they contained his notes, while the teacher began to read his book. However, the teacher soon noticed the trick, and grew angry at the young student's conduct. At-Tirmithee, however, explained that he remembered every word of what had been dictated to him. The teacher was reluctant to believe him, and challenged him to recite the traditions from his memory. At-Tirmithee accepted this challenge, and proceeded to recite all the traditions without committing a single mistake. At this, the teacher doubted his statement that he had not been able to revise from his notes, and decided to test his student by reciting forty other traditions, and ask at-Tirmithee to reproduce them. Without hesitation, at-Tirmithee repeated what he heard verbatim, and his teacher, convinced now of the truth of his statement, declared his pleasure and satisfaction at the young man's powers of retention.[47]

At-Tirmithee's Jaami', assembled through the use of this gift, is recognised as one of the most important works of hadeeth literature, and is unanimously included among the six canonical collections of hadeeth. It contains altogether 3956 hadeeths.[48] Not only did he take great pains to determine the identity, names, titles and pet names of each narrator in the traditions he cited; he also attempted to state the degree of reliability and how the jurists of the various schools of law used them. He added a note to almost every hadeeth, prefaced with the words, 'Aboo 'Eesaa says…' He then proceeds to state a range of points connected with the tradition. The following example will show the nature and importance of these notes.

Qutaybah, Hannaad, Aboo Kurayb, Ahmad ibn Manee', Mahmood ibn Ghaylan and Aboo 'Ammaar have related to us saying that Wakee' related to them from al-A'mash, from Habeeb ibn Abee Thaabit, from 'Urwah from 'Aa'ishah that the Prophet (ﷺ) once kissed one of his wives, and then went out to offer prayers without performing ablution. 'Urwah asked 'Aa'ishah: "Who could that be but yourself?" and 'Aa'ishah laughed.[49]

Aboo 'Eesaa says: "A similar tradition has been related by many of those who possessed knowledge among the Companions and the Followers, and this is the opinion of Sufyaan ath-Thawree and the jurists of Kufa, who hold that a kiss does not invalidate one's ablution. Maalik ibn Anas, al-Awzaa'ee, al-Shaafi'ee, Ahmad [ibn Hambal] and Is'haaq [ibn Raahawayh], however, hold that a kiss does invalidate ablution, and this is the opinion of many learned Companions and Successors. Our people [Maalik, Ahmad et al.] did not follow the hadeeth related by 'Aa'ishah from the Prophet (ﷺ) because it did not appear to be genuine to them on account of its isnaad. I heard Aboo Bakr al-'Attaar of Basra quote 'Alee ibn al-Madeenee, who said that Yahyaa ibn Sa'eed al-Qattaan declared this tradition to be weak, and said that it was useless. I also heard Muhammad ibn Ismaa'eel call it a weak tradition, saying that Habeeb ibn Abee Thaabit never heard any traditions from 'Urwah. Ibraaheem at-Taymee also related from 'Aa'ishah that the Prophet (ﷺ) kissed her and did not perform ablutions afterwards; but this too is not genuine, because Ibraaheem at-Taymee is not known to have heard this tradition from 'Aa'ishah. As a matter of fact, nothing that has been imputed to the Prophet (ﷺ) on this subject can be called genuine."[50]

The above example should suffice to demonstrate the nature of the remarks appended by Aboo 'Eesaa to the traditions of his Jaami'. He categorised the hadeeths as Saheeh (sound), Hasan (fair), Saheeh Hasan (sound fair), Hasan Saheeh (fair-sound), Ghareeb (rare), Da'eef (weak), or Munkar (rejected). But perhaps the most important feature of the Jaami' as far as assessments of reliability are concerned, is the category of hasan. Most of the traditions on which many of the rites and laws of religion are based belong to this class. Al-Bukhaaree, Ibn Hambal and others had already used the term, but rather sparingly, and in a loose and non-technical sense. Aboo 'Eesaa realised the importance of these hadeeths as a source of law, defined the term for the first time, and applied it to those traditions which fulfilled its requirements.[51]

To determine this class of traditions and the degree of their reliability, at-Tirmithee described some of them as Saheeh Hasan, some as Hasan, and others as Hasan Ghareeb. But he was not quite as consistent in his use of the term Hasan, and many traditionists have criticised him on this account.

There have been many commentaries written on this work. The best one available at present is the work of 'Abdur-Rahmaan Mubaarakpuree entitled, Tuhfatul-Ahwathee in four volumes and has been reprinted several times.[52]

The Sunan of An-Nasaa'ee

Another important work in this category is that compiled by Aboo 'Abdir-Rahmaan Ahmad ibn Shu'ayb an-Nasaa'ee, who was born in the year 827 (6 or 7 years after at-Tirmithee), at Nasaa, a town in Khurasan. Having received his early education in his home province, he travelled at the age of fifteen to Balkh, where he studied hadeeths with Qutaybah ibn Sa'eed for over a year.[53] He travelled widely in pursuit of hadeeth, to Iraq, Arabia, Syria, etc., and settled down in Egypt, where one of his teachers, Yoonus ibn 'Abdil-A'laa, was living. In 914 he went to Damascus, where he found the people holding erroneous views against 'Alee ibn Abee Taalib, due to the past influence of the Umayyads. In order to guide the people, he composed a book on the merits of 'Alee and wanted to read it from the pulpit of a mosque. But the congregation, instead of giving him a patient hearing, maltreated him, beat him, and drove him from the mosque. He died in the year 915, perhaps as a result of this incident.

An-Nasaa'ee was recognised as the leading traditionist of his day. 'Abdullaah ibn Ahmad ibn Hambal, Muhammad ibn Ibraaheem, 'Alee ibn 'Umar and other major traditionists, regarded him as such. His scrupulousness is evident from the fact that in connection with the traditions related by his teacher al-Haarith ibn Miskeen, he never used the term haddathanaa or akhbaranaa, as he did in the case of those traditions which had reached him via other scholars, for although the materials he acquired from al-Haarith were read by the latter in a public class, an-Nasaa'ee had been prohibited from attending, and thus was obliged to hear them by concealing himself at the gate of the lecture hall. He would write: I heard this hadeeth while it was read to al-Haarith ibn Miskeen.[54]

In his large work on Sunan (which he confessed contained a fair number of weak and dubious traditions), an-Nasaa'ee compiled the legal traditions which he considered to be either fairly reliable or of possible reliability. At the request of some of his friends, he also produced a synopsis of the Sunan, called al-Mujtabaa, or as-Sunan as-Sughraa. This latter work, which he claimed contained only reliable traditions, is now accepted as one of the six canonical collections.[55]

In as-Sunan as-Sughraa, an-Nasaa'ee entirely ignores the point of view of his contemporary at-Tirmithee, who had sought to apply traditions to specific problems, and arranged his book accordingly. An-Nasaa'ee's main object was only to establish the text of traditions and record the divergences between their various versions, almost all of which he extensively quotes, instead of merely referring to them, as Aboo Daawood and at-Tirmithee had done. In many places, he gives headings to the differences between the various narrators, and mentions the smallest differences between them. In some cases, after giving the various versions of a hadeeth, an-Nasaa'ee points out that some of them are incorrect. He is known, likewise, for his strictness in assessing and selecting his authorities; in fact, it is said that his principles of criticism were more rigorous than those of Muslim.[56] The book does, however, contain many weak and doubtful traditions related by unknown narrators of questionable credentials.

An-Nasaa'ee's Sunan did not attract the attention of early scholars with regard to commentary. As-Suyootee wrote a short commentary called Zahrur-Rabaa 'alaa al-Mujtabaa, more than 500 years later.[57]

The Sunan of Ad-Daarimee

This is among the earliest sunan works to have come down to us. Its author, Aboo Muhammad 'Abdullaah ibn 'Abdir-Rahmaan (797-868) was a member of the Arabian clan of the Banoo Daarim, an offshoot of the tribe of Tameem. Like many of his contemporaries, he travelled a good deal in search of hadeeths, and studied under important traditionists such as Yazeed ibn Haaroon and Sa'eed ibn 'Aamir. Well-known for his devotion to his field, he was also celebrated for his honesty and piety. When offered a post as judge at Samarqand he refused, afraid he might commit an injustice, until he was pressed hard to accept; and he resigned after judging only one case.[58]

The Sunan of ad-Daarimee contains some 3,550 traditions, arranged in 1,408 chapters according to subject matter. One special feature of the book is its general introductory chapter in which the compiler presents a number of hadeeths connected with a range of matters, including certain usages of the Arabs before Islaam, traditions connected with the life and character of the Prophet (ﷺ), material related to the written recording of hadeeths, and the great importance of knowledge. In the main body of the text, ad-Daarimee follows the same plan as the later sunan compilers. After citing a group of traditions, he adds notes, in some of which he offers his own opinion on certain problems, identifies some narrators, or criticises their reliability, or draws attention to variant versions of a tradition. These notes, however, are much briefer than those appended to the previously mentioned sunan works.

The book is generally accepted as an important source, and has been regarded by some traditionists as the sixth of the canonical collections. It never, however, attained the position of the any of the former three works, because it contains more weak and defective traditions than they do.[59]

The Sunan of Ibn Maajah

Most hadeeth scholars prefer the Sunan of Ibn Maajah (824-886) to the work of ad-Daarimee, including it in the Sound Six collections. Aboo ‘Abdillaah Muhammad ibn Yazeed ibn Rabee‘ (commonly known as Ibn Maajah), was born at Qazween. He began the study of hadeeth in his late teens and visited the important centres of learning in Iran, Iraq, Syria and Egypt, and studied under the great traditionists of his day.[60] Ibn Maajah compiled several works in the area of hadeeth, the most important being his Sunan. In this work, the author collected 4,341 traditions, distributed over 32 books and 1,500 chapters. Out of them 3002 have been recorded by authors of the remaining five books. Of the remaining 1339 hadeeths which were recorded by Ibn Maajah alone, 428 were Saheeh, 199 were Hasah, 613 were Da‘eef and 99 were Munkar (fabrications).[61] It is said that after completing the book, Ibn Maajah presented it for criticism to Aboo Zar‘ah, recognised as the most competent hadeeth critic of the day. Aboo Zar‘ah liked the general plan of the book, and remarked that he expected it to supersede the hadeeth works that then enjoyed general currency. He also noted that the number of weak traditions in the book was not large.

Despite this approbation, however, it emerges that the book does in fact include a many forged traditions. Ibn al-Jawzee has declared in his work al-Mawdoo‘aat that all the traditions on the merits of individuals or tribes or towns are forged and many such traditions are found in Sunan Ibn Maajah.[62] Although other scholars of the Sunan also recorded weak traditions, they mostly noted them in their books. However, Ibn Maajah made no mention of the weak traditions in his work. Scholars like Ibn al-Atheer (d. 606 AH), Ibn Hajar (d. 852 AH) and Qastallaanee (d. 923 AH) disliked including this book among the Sound Six.

The main features of Sunan Ibn Maajah are that it has very little repetition and is one of the best in arrangement of chapters and sub-chapters.[63]

The Sunan of Ad-Daaraqutnee

Another Sunan work of importance was compiled by Abul-Hasan ‘Alee ibn ‘Umar (918-995), generally known as ad-Daaraqutnee on account of his residence in the Baghdad urban quarter known as Daar Qutn.

Ad-Daaraqutnee rapidly acquired a sound foundation in Arabic literature and the Islamic sciences, in particular the traditions and the variant readings (qiraa'aat) of the Qur'aan. His book on the latter subject is acknowledged as the first work of its type, and most later authors follow its general plan. Among his students, who recognised his wide and critical knowledge of hadeeth, were al-Haakim, Aboo Nu'aym al-Isfahaanee, whose book the Hilyatul-Awliyaa is said to be the best work of Muslim hagiography, Tammaam of Rayy, and the traditionist 'Abdul-Ghanee ibn Sa'eed. Al-Haakim, in particular, who narrates traditions from about 2,000 individuals, remarked that he never met a scholar like ad-Daaraqutnee, whose knowledge proved encyclopedic whatever subject was broached.

Almost every traditionist who came to Baghdad made a point of visiting him. Aboo Mansoor ibn al-Karkhee, while compiling his own Musnad, depended on ad-Daaraqutnee's help in identifying defective traditions; while Aboo Bakr al-Barqaani based a work on hadeeth on notes dictated by ad-Daaraqutnee to Aboo Mansoor.[203] He likewise rendered material help in the compilation of a musnad work by Ibn Hinzaabah, the able and learned minister of the Ikhsheedee rulers of Egypt. Having learnt that this Musnad was being compiled, ad-Daaraqutnee travelled from Baghdad to Egypt, where he remained until the work was completed. Throughout this period, Ibn Hinzaabah showed him immense deference and respect, and upon completion bestowed upon him rich rewards.

Ad-Daaraqutnee himself compiled many useful works on hadeeth and related subjects. The Sunan, which was recognised as one of the most reliable hadeeth collections - next in importance only to the Sound Six. It was used by al-Baghawee (d. 1122) as one of the chief sources for his influential Masaabeeh as-Sunnah, which in turn formed the basis for the Mishkaat al-Masaabih of at-Tabreezee.

In his Sunan, Daaraqutni adduces traditions he considers reasonably authentic, supplementing them with isnaads and alternate versions. Of the very first hadeeth, for instance, he gives five different versions, with five separate chains of authority, some of which he adjudges weak. To some traditions he adds notes, in which he attempts to fix their degree of reliability and the identity of some of their narrators, and assesses their character and reliability. However, the number of weak traditions in his Sunan is fairly large; it is at any rate larger than in any of the Sunan works conventionally included in the canonical Six; and has hence not been included among them.[64]

The Sunan of Al-Bayhaqee

After ad-Daaraqutnee came Aboo Bakr Ahmad ibn al-Husayn of Bayhaq, a group of villages near Nishapur. Al-Bayhaqee was born in 994 CE, and studied tradition under more than a hundred eminent traditionists of his time, including al-Haakim an-Nisaabooree, of whom he became the most eminent pupil. Having excelled in the various Islaamic sciences, al-Bayhaqee soon became a remarkably prolific author, producing several hundred books on hadeeth and Shaafi'ee law, some of which are said to be unparalleled in the history of the literature.[65] His two Sunan works, of an unusual length and thoroughness, are particularly revered. His reputation as a traditionist and a jurist attracted the attention of the learned of Nishapur, who invited him to their city and requested him to read one of his books to them. He died in the year 1065 CE.

The Sunan of Sa'eed Ibn Mansoor

Less well-known, but earlier than all the sunan works so far mentioned, is the Sunan of Aboo 'Uthmaan Sa'eed ibn Mansoor ibn Shu'bah (d. 841). He was born at Merv and brought up in the city of Balkh. Ibn Mansoor wandered throughout a large part of the Muslim world, finally settling at Makkah.

Ibn Mansoor learnt traditions from a range of prominent experts including Imaam Maalik, Hammaad, Aboo 'Awaanah and others, and in turn instructed another group of luminaries such as Muslim, Aboo Daawood, and Ahmad ibn Hambal, all of whom spoke of his scholarship in terms of the highest veneration.[66] His Sunan, in which he is said to have had great confidence, appears to have been compiled towards the end of his life. It contains a large number of traditions received from the Prophet (ﷺ) through only three intermediaries.[67]

The Sunan of Aboo Muslim Al-Kashshee

Aboo Muslim Ibraahim ibn 'Abdillaah al-Kashshee (d. 895), was from a village called Kashsh located in Khuzistaan. After studying traditions under Aboo 'Aasim an-Nabeel, Aboo 'Awaanah and others, he visited Baghdad, where he delivered lectures on hadeeth. These soon attracted a remarkably large number of students, so many, in fact, that his voice was not audible to them all, and seven men had to be appointed to repeat his words to various parts of the audience. Like the compilation of Ibn Mansoor, his sunan is said to have contained many reports transmitted through only three narrators.[68]

THE MU‘JAM WORKS

Although the Mu‘jam works never acquired the esteem accorded the collections of Sunan, many were compiled and are still extensively used. They differ in form from one author to another. Sometimes it is arranged according to alphabetical names of the Companions, other times according to regions and yet other times according to the alphabetical names of teachers of compilers.

The Mu‘jam of at-Tabaraanee

The best known Mu‘jams are those of Abul-Qaasim Sulaymaan ibn Ahmad ibn Ayyoob at-Tabaraanee. At-Tabaraanee was born in Tiberias, then a flourishing Muslim city, in 873. His family belonged to the Lakhm tribe from Yemen which had migrated to Quds. Ath-Thahabee mentioned that at-Tabaraanee began his study of hadeeth at the age of 13 in Tabareeyah. A year later he went to Quds to further his studies.[69] On his academic travels, he visited most of the important centres of learning in Syria, Egypt, the Hijaaz, Yemen, Iraq, Afghanistan and Iran, acquiring traditions from about a thousand narrators. At-Tabaraanee spent 30 years learning hadeeth and the number of his teachers exceeds one thousand. He finally settled at Isfahan in 902, where a pension was fixed for him by the Governor Ibn Rustum. There he lived a quiet life for 70 years, teaching hadeeth and compiling a number of books on the subject, dying at last in 970 at the age of one hundred.

Of his works, a list of which is provided by ath-Thahabee, the most important are his three Mu‘jams. The largest of these, commonly known as the Great Mu‘jam (al-Mu‘jam al-Kabeer), is in fact a Musnad work. Its 12 volumes contain about 25,000 traditions that have been collected together under the names of the various Companions by whom they are narrated, the names being presented alphabetically. It contains a great deal of historical information along with the hadeeths. This book absorbed totally or partially hundreds of early works.[70] The Medium Mu‘jam (al-Mu‘jam al-Awsat) is in six volumes, and contains the rare traditions narrated to the compiler by his teachers, whose names, together with their traditions, are set out, again alphabetically. The author took great pride in this work, which, although it contains a number of weak traditions, demonstrates his wide knowledge of the subject. Finally, there is at-Tabaraanee's Lesser Mu'jam (al-Mu'jam as-Sagheer), which was his first Mu'jam, and which contains only one tradition narrated by each of his teachers.[71]

Although these are the best-known works of the type, many other Mu'jam works were compiled, some of which are listed by Haaji Khaleefah.

THE JAAMI' WORKS

Some generations later after the eras of the classics, another genre of hadeeth works appeared in which scholars gathered the narrations from existing works and arranging them in a variety of different ways.

The Jaami' of Ibn al-Atheer

Al-Mubaarak ibn Muhammad ibn 'Abdil-Kareem al-Jazaree belonged to a famous literary family. His brother 'Alee was a historian famous for his al-Kaamil fee at-Taareekh, and his other brother Nasrullaah was the author of many literary works. All three of them are known by the title "Ibn al-Atheer".

Our author, the muhaddith, was born in 554AH in Jazeerah of Ibn 'Umar, a town north of Mosul. In 565AH he moved to Mosul and made it his permanent residence. He became the leading scholar of his time in Arabic language, exegesis of the Qur'aan, hadeeth and Fiqh. Ibn al-Atheer held important advisory posts in successive governments. Later he became ill with gout in his legs and was unable to stretch his legs of walk. All of his literary works were productions of his days of illness. Ibn al-Atheer used to dictate to his students and they would write for him.

His an-Nihaayah fee Ghareeb al-Hadeeth is a very important work for researchers and scholars for understanding the meanings of unusual words used in hadeeth literature. However his main work was Jaami' al-Usool fee Ahaadeeth ar-Rasool in which he collected all the hadeeths recorded in al-Muwatta, Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, Saheeh Muslim, Jaami' at-Tirmithee, Sunan Abee Daawood, and Sunan an-Nasaa'ee. He omitted the sanads and arranged the chapters in alphabetical order.

The best edition of this work is that of 'Abdul-Qaadir al-Arnaa'oot of Damascus.

The Zawaa'id Work of al-Haythamee

'Alee ibn Abee Bakr ibn Sulaymaan al-Haythamee (735-807AH) studied the Qur'aan after reaching the age of maturity. He became the constant student and companion of the famous hadeeth scholar Zaynud-Deen al-'Iraaqee. Al-Haythamee married Zaynud-Deen's daughter and he taught him the science of hadeeth and the method of extracting hadeeths from works that were not mentioned in the Sound Six. As a result, al-Haythamee became an expert on this subject and composed a number of works on zawaa'id.

Later he collected all of his books on zawaa'id in a single encyclopaedic work named Majma' az-Zawaa'id wa manba' al-Fawaa'id. In it he dropped the sanads for the sake of brevity, which created a kind of defect in the work, and arranged the book according to the Jaami' and Sunan patterns, explaining the grade of the hadeeth or mentioning the names of defective narrators. However, his gradings were not always acceptable to later scholars. The book was published in 10 volumes in Cairo in 1352AH.

The Jaami' of as-Suyootee

Jalaalud-Deen 'Abdur-Rahmaan ibn Kamaalid-Deen as-Suyootee was born in 849AH and his father died when he was 6 years old. His list of 150 teachers contain the names of all the famous scholars of his time. As-Suyootee compiled over 600 works which were mostly abridgments of the books of earlier scholars. Many scholars of his day disliked his style of writing and accused him of stealing the materials of the early scholars.

RANKING OF HADEETH COLLECTIONS

The works of hadeeth literature have been grouped by the traditionists into four classes, according to their authority and importance.

First: To the first category belong the works which are considered the most reliable. These are (i) the Muwatta of Maalik; (ii) Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, and (iii) Saheeh Muslim. The latter two of these works include almost all the traditions contained in the Muwatta, and hence most major traditionists did not include it in the six canonical collections. These three books have been generally accepted as authentic since the lifetime of their authors. The Muwatta was declared by Imaam ash-Shaafi'ee to be the most authentic book after the Qur'aan,[72] while the Saheeh of al-Bukhaaree was, as described earlier, received by 90,000 students from the author himself, and was accepted as reliable by all the important traditionists of the time, such as Abul-Hasan ibn al-Qattaan and others. The Saheeh of Muslim, too, did not take long to receive the general approval of the traditionists.

Second: To a second category belong the four Sunan works, which, together with the two Saheeh, are known as al-Kutub al-Sittah (the Six Books) or as-Sihaah as-Sittah (the Sound Six). The tendency to associate some of the Sunan works with the two Saheeh appears, to have begun sometime in the middle of the fourth century, when Sa'eed ibn al-Sakan[73] announced that the two Saheehs of al-Bukhaaree and Muslim, and the two Sunans of Aboo Daawood and an-Nasaa'ee, were the foundations of Islaam. After a period of time the Jaami' of at-Tirmithee was added to the above four books, and the five together were given the title of al-Usool al-Khamsah (the Five Foundations).[74]

It is not easy to determine when the Jaami' of at-Tirmithee received the general recognition of the traditionists. Ibn Hazm, whose list of reliable hadeeth works is still extant, directed some criticism against the book, because it contained traditions related by the questionable figures of al-Masloob and al-Kalbee.[75] But it is probable that the general recognition of at-Tirmithee's Jaami' preceded that of the work of Ibn Maajah, which was added to the five books for the first time by Muhammad ibn Taahir, who died around the beginning of the sixth century (505/1113). None the less, it has been pointed out that throughout the sixth century a place among the five was denied Ibn Maajah by the traditionists. It was from the seventh century that the Six Books became generally recognised as the most reliable collections of hadeeth.

The following principles appear to have guided the traditionists in their choice of these six works:

(i) Their compilers had laid down certain clear principles for the selection and assessment of the hadeeth they chose.

(ii) They mostly contained sound or fair traditions, and any weak material was usually indicated as such.

(iii) The material they contained had been carefully assessed and checked by the leading authorities in different parts of the Islamic world, and furnished with extensive commentaries which clarified their virtues and demerits.

[75] Tadreeb ar-Raawee, p. 56.

(iv) They had been used as a basis for the establishment of legal and theological positions.[76]

Third: To a third category belong such Musnads, Musannafs, and other collections as had been compiled before or after the Saheehs of al-Bukhaaree and Muslim, contained reliable as well as unreliable material, and had not been thoroughly examined by the traditionists or used as source texts in books of law and doctrine. Works of this type include the Musnads of ‘Abd ibn Humayd and at-Tayaalisee, and the Musannaf works of ‘Abdur-Razzaaq, Ibn Abee Shaybah, and others.

Fourth: A fourth category contains collections of hadeeths made by compilers who in the later period collected traditions which were not found in the collections of the early anthologists. Much such material was spurious. The Musnad of al-Khwaarizmee may be included in this class.

According to some authorities, there exists a fifth category of hadeeth works, which contain such traditions as are declared by the Muslim doctors to be unreliable or definitely forged.[77]

NINE: Biographies

Scholars of hadeeth realized the importance of chronology, biography and criticism from the beginning of the narration of hadeeths. Consequently, like all of the other elements of this science, independent works dealing with narrators and chronology appeared before the end of the second century.

The actual beginning point is difficult to determine, however, Ibn Nadeem mentioned two books in his Fihrist as Kitaab at-Taareekh by ‘Abdullaah ibn al-Mubaarak and the other by al-Layth ibn Sa‘d (d. 781CE). Al-Waaqidee and Haytham ibn ‘Adee, both of whom died at the beginning of the third century, did a number of works which served as important sources for later writers like, Kitaab at-Tabaqaat, Kitaab Tabaqaat man Rawaa ‘anin-Nabee (The Book of Levels of Those Who Narrated from the Prophet), etc.[1]

By the third century, the compilation of biographies, which came to be called Asmaa ar-Rijaal or Kutub ar-Rijaal, almost every traditionist of repute compiled simultaneously with his collection of narrations, some biographies of the narrators. All of the compilers of the Sound Six have to their credit one or more important books on the biography of the narrators. There also appeared specialists like; Ibn Sa‘d (230AH/884), Khaleefah ibn al-Khayaat, and Ibn Abee Khaythamah (d. 279AH/892 CE).

The magnitude of these biographical dictionaries may be understood from the large number of narrators whose biographies they contain. Ibn Sa‘d’s Tabaqaat contains the biographies of more than 4,000 traditionists. Al-Bukhaaree’s Taareekh deals with more than 42,000 traditionists. Al-Khateebal-Baghdaadee in his History of Baghdad, gives short biographies of 7,831 persons. Ibn ‘Asaakir in the eighty volumes of his History of Damascus, collected together the biographies of a much larger number of people. Ibn Hajar in his Tahtheeb at-Tahtheeb and Meezaan al-I‘tidaal, summarized the biographical references of 12,415 and 14,343 narrators of traditions respectively.[2]

The works on the Asmaa ar-Rijaal, however, differ from one another in their scope, their general plan, and the detailed nature of their contents, according to the main object of their compilers and authors. Some of them, like the Tabaqat al-Huffaaz of Thahabee, and various other works on weak or un-reliable narrators, contain extremely short notices on a particular class of narrators of traditions. Others deal with only the narrators’ names, pet names (kunyah) and their titles (nisbah). Examples of this type are the various works on Asmaa wal-Kunaa, and the well-known Kitaab al-Ansaab of al-Sam'aanee. Yet others contain biographical details of all narrators who lived in or visited a particular town, e.g. Aleppo, Baghdad, Damascus, etc. The works of al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee, Ibn al-'Asaakir and others are examples of this type. Some of them dealt with only the reliable or unreliable narrators, like Kitaab al-Thiqaat and Kitaab ad-Du'afaa by Ibn Hibbaan and others. Others contain the biographies of only such narrators as find a place in any particular collection of traditions or in a group of them. To this class belong a large number of works that deal with the lives of the narrators on whom al-Bukhaaree or Muslim or the authors of all the Sound Six have relied.

[1] Hadith Literature, pp. 168-9.

[2] Hadith Literature, pp. 170-1.

The works on the Asmaa ar-Rijaal may be classified into two main groups: (1) The general works and (2) The special works.

1. General Works. This refers to those works which contain the biographies of all the narrators, or at least of all the important ones among them, who had been known to their compilers. Most of the early works on this subject belong to this class. The Tabaqaat of Muhammad ibn Sa'd, the three Histories of al-Bukhaaree, the History of Ahmad ibn Abee Khaythamah, and many other works on the Asmaa ar-Rijaal, which were compiled during the third century of the Hijrah following this pattern.[3]

Tabaqaat Ibn Sa'd

The earliest of these works received by us is the Kitaab al- Tabaqaat al-Kabeer by Ibn Sa'd. Aboo 'Abdillaah Muhammad ibn Sa'd ibn Munee' az-Zuhree belonged to a family of Babylonian slaves of the family of the great traditionist, 'Abdullaah ibn 'Abbaas, who had granted them their freedom. Born at Basra, the great centre of hadeeth learning, Ibn Sa'd was attracted to this field and traveled through Kufa, Makkah and Madeenah where he stayed for quite a long time. When he finally came to Baghdad, the greatest centre of intellectual activity in his time, he was blessed with the opportunity to become the personal literary assistant to al-Waaqidee, one of the early Arab historians. He worked for him for such a long time that he was given title "Kaatib al-Waqidee" (the secretary of Waqidee), by which he became generally known.

Eventually Ibn Sa'd's reputation in Baghdad as a historian and traditionist attracted a band of students who sat at his feet and studied Tradition and History with him. One of the most prominent among them was the great historian, al-BaIaadhuree who in his later career borrowed a great deal from Ibn Sa'd in his well known work Futooh al-Buldaan. Ibn Sa'd died in the year 230AH/844CE.[4]

Ibn Sa'd's Kitaab Akhbaar an-Nabee constitutes only a portion of his major work, Tabaqaat. It was compiled and completed by the author, but was handed down to posterity by his student, Haarith ibn Muhammad ibn Abee Usaamah (802-896).

The Tabaqaat was completely planned and compiled by Ibn Sa'd, but could not be completed by him. He dictated whatever he had written of this book, to his student, Husayn ibn Fahm (826-901), who is reported to have been a keen student of traditions and of the biographies of the narrators.[5] Ibn Fahm completed the book according to the plan of its author, added to it his short biographical notice as well as that of certain other narrators whose names had already been included by the author in the general plan of his work, and read it to his own students.[6]

The Tabaqaat of Ibn Sa'd is one of the earliest extant works on Asmaa ar-Rijaal containing biographical notices of most of the important narrators of the most important period in the history of traditions. It is a rich mine of many-sided, valuable information about the early history of Islaam. It may be described not only as the most important extant work on the subject, but also as one of the most important works in Arabic literature in general. Since the beginning of the fourth century A.H., it has been used as a source by a large number of authors on Arabian history and biography. Al-Balaadhuree, at-Tabaree, al-Khateeib al-Baghdaadee, Ibn al-Atheer, al-Nawawee and Ibn Hajar all used it as an important source for their works, and as-Suyootee summarized it. As a general biographical dictionary of the narrators it appears to have always occupied a unique position in the Asmaa ar-Rijaal. The other works of the Tabaqaat class deal only with particular classes of the narrators.[7]

Kitaab at-Taareekh of Imaam al-Bukhaaree

Ibn Sa'd's Tabaqaat was soon followed by the works of al-Bukhaaree stated that he possessed some biographical knowledge about every narrator of 300,000 traditions he had memorized. He compiled three books on the history of the narrators in general. The largest of these is said to have contained the biographical notices of more than 40,000 narrators. But no complete manuscript of the book is known to exist. Only various parts of it are preserved in certain libraries on the basis of which the Daa'irat al-Ma'aarif, Hyderabad (India) has prepared a text of the book, and published it.

2. Special Works. By special works is meant works dedicated to particular groups, backgrounds or eras of narrators. These specialized biographical dictionaries of narrators developed almost simultaneously with the general biographical dictionaries

The most important of them are: a) those containing the biographies of the Companions; b) those containing the biographies of the narrators who lived in or visited any particular town or province; c) and those containing the biographies of the narrators belonging to the various schools of the jurists.

A. Biographical Dictionaries of the Companions

These constitute the vital part of the Asmaa ar-Rijaal, however, no independent book on the subject appears to have been written before the third century of the Hijrah, when the great traditionist, al-Bukhaaree, compiled the first independent biographical dictionary of the Companions which must have been mainly based on: (a) the Seerah literature; (b) the numerous monographs relating to the various important events during the early period of the history of Islaam; (c) a large number of traditions containing biographical material relating to the Companions, and the earlier general works on the Asmaa ar-Rijaal.

Al-Bukhaaree was followed by numerous authors during the subsequent periods in the history of Islaam, who produced a vast literature on the subject. Aboo Ya'laa Ahmad ibn 'Alee (201-307/816-919), Abul-Qaasim 'Abdullaah al-Baghawee (828-929), the great traditionist and copyist, Aboo Hafs 'Umar ibn Ahmad (commonly known as Ibn Shahin, 909-995), one of the most prolific writers of his time (who spent more than 700 dirhams on ink only), Aboo 'Abdullaah Muhammad ibn Yahyaa ibn Manda (d. 301/913), Aboo Nu'aym Ahmad ibn 'Abdillaah (947-1012), who has been described as one of the best traditionists, Ibn 'Abdil-Barr (978-1070) of Cordova, a contemporary of al-Kahateeb al-Baghdaadee, and the greatest traditionist of his time in the West, Aboo Moosaa Muhammad ibn Abee Bakr (501-581/1107-1185), and many others produced an extensive literature on the biographies of the Companions.[8]

Usud al-Ghaabah of Ibn al-Atheer

The results of the researches of all these scholars were collected together in the seventh century A.H. by the well-known historian and traditionist, ‘Izzud-Deen ibn al-Atheer (555-630/1160-1230) in his book, Usud al-Ghaabah, which was based mainly on the works of Ibn Manda, Aboo Nu‘aym, Aboo Moosaa and Ibn ‘Abdul-Barr (whose Istee‘aab contained the biographies of only 300 Companions, and to which a supplement was written by Ibn Fat’hoon, which contained the biographical notices of about the same number of Companions. Ibn al-Atheer, however, does not follow his sources blindly.

Having discussed in the introduction the chief sources of his book and its general plan, Ibn al-Atheer has defined the term Companions, has given a short sketch of the biography of the Prophet (ﷺ), and has put together in the alphabetical order the biographies of 7,554 Companions, some of whom were discovered by him through his independent researches. In the various articles, he has generally given the names of the Companions, their kunyahs, their genealogy and certain biographical matters relating to them. When he differs from his predecessors, he discusses the matter at length, gives reasons in his own support, and explains the causes of the mistakes made by his predecessors. In spite of many repetitions in it, Usud al-Ghaabah has been generally appreciated and accepted by the traditionists as a reliable authority on its subject.

Several biographers, e.g. an-Nawawee, ath-Thahabee, al-Qushayree, as-Suyutee, and others, have prepared summaries of Ibn al-Atheer’s work.[9]

Al-Isaabah fee Tamyeez as-Sahaabah of Ibn Hajar

Usud al-Ghaabah was followed in the ninth century of the Hijrah by a more comprehensive work on the subject the al-

Isaabah fee Tamyeez as-Sahaabah. Its author, Shihaabud-Deen Abul-Fadl ibn ‘Alee Ibn Hajar al-‘Asqalaanee (773-852/1371-1448) was the greatest literary figure of his time. He was born at old Cairo in 773. He lost both his mother and his father (who was a Jurist) when he was an infant. He was brought up by one of his relatives who was a businessman. But the little orphan was endowed by nature with strong intellectual powers and great tenacity of purpose. In spite of great difficulties in his way, he stuck to his literary pursuits, and soon excelled in Arabic language and literature as well as in all the various Islamic sciences and Arabic calligraphy. To hadeeth particularly he devoted a considerable part of his life. For 10 years he sat for its sake at the feet of the well-known traditionist,

[9] Hadith Literature, pp. 180-1.

Zaynud-Deen al-'Iraaqee (725-806/1351-1404) who had reintroduced into the teaching of traditions the old method of Imlaa (dictation), and had brought the study of hadeeth back to its former glory. Having finished his studies, Ibn Hajar settled down at Cairo in 1403, and devoted himself to the service of hadeeth and the connected sciences. His authority as a traditionist was recognized by his contemporaries, and he was appointed as its professor several educational institutions; He also served as a judge, a post he accepted after refusing it several times. He died in 852/1404. He left about 150 of his incomplete and complete compositions and compilations that show his versatile genius.

The Fat'h al-Baaree a commentary on Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, is described as a work by which was paid the great debt that the literary world of Islaam owed to the great work of al-Bukhaaree for six centuries.[10]

In the Isaabah, Ibn Hajar has put together the results of the labours of all his predecessors in the field of the biographies of the Companions, criticising them in certain cases, and adding to them the results of his own researches. He has divided his book into four parts:

Part I. Such persons as are mentioned as Companions in any tradition, genuine or fair or weak, directly or indirectly.

Part II. Such persons as were too young when the Prophet (ﷺ) died, but were born during his lifetime in the family of the Companions, which leads to the presumption that they fulfilled the necessary conditions of being one of them.

Part III. Such persons as are known to have lived both before and after the advent of Islaam, but are not known to have ever associated with the Prophet (ﷺ). These persons have never been known to be Companions but they are mentioned in some of the works on the life of the Companions simply because they lived in the same period with them.

Part IV. This part contains the biographies of people who were wrongly mentioned in some of the biographical dictionaries as Companions.[11]

B. The Biographical Dictionaries of Narrators Who Lived or visited a particular town or Province

Another huge set of biographical dictionaries of narrators had been completed according to places or provinces where they lived-or which they visited. The number of such dictionaries is large. Not only almost all the provinces, but almost every important town, had not only one or two but several biographers who collected together the biographies of every important traditionist or man of letters who either lived in it or visited it. Makkah, Madeenah, Basra, Kufah, Wasit, Damascus, Antioch, Alexandria, Qayrawaan, Cordova, Mawsil, Aleppo, Baghdad, Isfahan, Bukhaara, Merv, etc. all had their historians and biographers of their men of letters.

Many of these provincial historians dealt with the political history of these provinces. A number of them dealt mainly with the biographies of their men of letters, in general, and those of the narrators and the tradifionists, in particular. A large number of the early biographical dictionaries, which contained the biographies of the important Muslim scholars of particular places (since their conquest by the Muslims till the time of the compilers), are supplemented by their successors with those of the eminent men of the later periods down to almost modern times.[12]

Tareekh Baghdaad of Al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee

One of the most important works of this type is al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee's Taareekh Baghdaad that is the earliest biographical dictionary of the men of letters, principally traditionists, who either belonged to, or delivered lectures in, the great metropolis.

Al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee, whose full name was Aboo Bakr Ahmad ibn 'Alee, was the son of khateeb[13] of a village near Baghdad. He was born in the year 392AH/1002, and began the study of hadeeth at the age of 11, which took him to the various centres of learning in Mesopotamia, Syria, Arabia, and Persia. Al-Khateeb excelled in the various Islaamic sciences, particularly, the field of Asmaa ar-Rijaal and hadeeth. He delivered lectures on hadeeth in Damascus, Baghdad and other centers of learning, and some of his own teachers (e.g. al-Azharee and al-Barqaanee) accepted him as an authority on traditions, and received them from him. Finally, he settled down in Baghdad, where his authority on hadeeth was recognized by the Caliph al-Qaa'im and his minister Ibn Maslamah (d. 1058), who had ordered that no preacher should narrate in his sermon any tradition that was not approved by al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee. Here he read out almost all his books to his students, and here he died in 463/1071.

His life in Baghdad had not been altogether uneventful until the revolt of al-Basaaseeree (1058) in which al-Khateeb's patron, Ibn Maslamah, was killed. Al-Khateeb suffered at the hands of the rebel and his supporters and was eventually forced to leave the city and wander about in Syria for some time. He did not return to Baghdad until 451, after al-Basaaseeree was executed. He suffered at the hands of the Hambalites, because he had left the Hambalee school of jurisprudence and joined the Shaafi'ite school, and also on account of his liberal views towards the Ash'arites and the Scholastic philosophers. Many treatises were written against him by the Hambalites, are mentioned by Haaji Khaleefah. Al-Khateeb, however, had been fortunate in having attained all his great desires—namely, (1) to, read out his great History of Baghdad to his students in that town[14]; and (2) to be buried by the side of the grave of al-Bishr al-Haafee (767-841CE).[15]

Al-Khateeb compiled 56 large and small books and treatises a list of which is given by Yaaqoot in his Mu'jam al-Udabaa. The most important of these works is his Taareekh Baghdaad. In this monumental work, which he dictated to his students in the year 461AH, having given the topography of Baghdad, Rusaafah, and al-Madaa'in (Ptesiphon), al-Khateeb compiled the biographies of 7,831 eminent men and women (chiefly, traditionists) who were either born in Baghdad, or who came to it from other places and delivered lectures on traditions. He has also described some important visitors to the city. He gives their names, kunyah, dates of death, and certain other biographical matters, and the opinions of important traditionists about their reliability.

In the arrangement of the various articles, al-Khateeb gave the pride of place to the Companions. They are followed by those having the name Muhammad. In the other articles alphabetical order has been followed. The articles on those who are known by their kunyah, and on women, are put at the end.

In this book al-Khateeb has shown his vast knowledge of hadeeth and Asmaa ar-Rihaal, and has also demonstrated his impartiality and critical acumen. He, always gives the source of his information, and very often discusses (in his notes) the reliability of the traditions quoted, and of the reports received by him; he tries to determine the facts without prejudice or partiality.[16]

Al-Khateeb's description of Imaam Ahmad and ash-Shaafi'ee as "master of the traditionists" and "crown of the jurists", respectively, for which he has been criticised, does not appear to be unfair. He is generally accepted as trustworthy, and is regarded as the greatest traditionist of his time in the East, as his contemporary of Cordova, Ibn 'Abdil-Barr, is taken as the greatest traditionist of his time in the West.[17]

The entries in al-Khateeb's dictionary were up to 450 A.H. His successors continued the work after him. As-Sam'aanee (506-562/1113-1167), al-Dubaythee (558-637/1163-1239), Ibn an-Najjaar (578-643/1183-1245) and others wrote supplements to his book compiling biographies of eminent men of Baghdad till their own times.[18]

Taareekh Dimishq of Ibn 'Asaakir

The History of Baghdad was followed by Ibn al-'Asaakir in his huge biographical dictionary of the eminent men of Damascus in 80 volumes which won the admiration of the later writers.

Ibn al-'Asaakir, whose full name was Abul-Qasim 'Alee ibn al-Hasan ibn Hibatullaah ibn 'Abdillaah ibn al-Husayn, was born in a respectable and literary family in Damascus in 499/1105. His father, his brother, his son and his nephew all are described by as-Subkee as traditionists of some eminence.[19] Some of his predecessors also appear to have taken part in the campaigns against the Crusaders which gave him the title of Ibn al-'Asaakir, by which he is generally known. Ibn al-'Asaakir, having prosecuted his early studies with his father and other teachers in Damascus, travelled widely and visited all the important centres of hadeeth learning, a long list of which is given by as-Subkee in his Tabaqaat. He sat at the feet of more than 1,300 teachers of hadeeth, of whom more than 80 were women. Finally, he settled down in Damascus where he devoted himself wholly to the service of hadeeth and connected subjects. Ibn al-'Asaakir compiled books and treatises, and delivered lectures on them in a college which had been founded for him by the great general and jurist, Noorud-Deen Muhammad az-Zanjee. Noorud-Deen offered him several posts in the judiciary, all of which he continually refused until he died in 571/1175.[20]

The long list of Ibn al-'Asaakir's works are mentioned by Yaaqoot in Mu'jam al-Udabaa.[21] Many of these are still preserved in manuscript form in various Eastern and Western libraries. The most important and most voluminous of his works was his History of Damascus. Its compilation was taken up at the request of a friend of the author. But the work could not be continued due to certain problems and sad events. However, the great enthusiasm of Noorud-deen az-Zanjee to see the work completed eventually prevailed and the author was induced to complete it during his old age.[22]

Ibn al-‘Asaakir began his history text by giving a brief history of Syria in general and of Damascus in particular. He then made a brief exposition on the superiority of Syria to other places based on certain traditions extolling Syria in general and Damascus in particular, followed by a description of its prophets and monasteries. Ibn al-‘Asaakir then collected together the biographies of the eminent men and women of various classes, chiefly traditionists, who either lived in or visited Damascus. The biographical section of his work begins with articles on those whose names are Ahmad, preceded by a short biography of the Prophet of Islaam (ﷺ). All the entries are arranged alphabetically without any preference given to any class of people. Articles on men whose names are not known are arranged according to the alphabetical order of their kunyahs at the end of the work, followed by entries on the eminent women in the same order as in the case of men.

Like al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee and Ibn al-‘Asaakir, various other traditionists and historians collected the biographies of men of letters in general, and of the hadeeth narrators in particular, of various other towns. Ibn Mandah (d. 301/911) and Aboo Nu‘aym (336-403) of Isfahan collected together the biographies of the narrators who belonged to their town.[23] The work of Aboo Nu‘aym is preserved in the libraries of Rampur, Constantinople and Leiden. Al-Haakim (321-405/933-1014) compiled the biographies of the hadeeth narrators who belonged to Nishapur. Abul-Qaasim ‘Umar ibn Ahmad al-‘Uqaylee, generally known as Ibn al-‘Adeem (588- 660/1191-1262) collected together the biographies of eminent men, including a large number of traditionists, of Aleppo in about 30 volumes. It was supplemented by his different successors.[24] Abu Sa‘d as-Sam‘aanee (506-562/1113-1167) compiled a biographical dictionary on the traditionists of Merv in 20 volumes.[25] Ibn al-Dubaythee (558-637/1162-1239) wrote one on the traditionists of Wasit,[26] Ibn an-Najjaar did the same for those of Kufa,[27] Ibn Shabbah (173-263/789-876) for those of Basra,[28] Ibn al-Bazzaaz for Herat, and Ibn ar-Raafi‘ for Qazwin.[29]

TEN: Women Scholars of Hadeeth

History records few scholarly enterprises, at least before modern times, in which women have played an important and active role side by side with men. The science of hadeeth forms an outstanding exception in this respect. The texts of the Qur'aan and teachings of the Prophet (ﷺ) always stressed the importance of women and defended their rights against pre-Islaamic customs. As a result, the Muslim community was happy to entrust matters of the greatest religious responsibility to women, who, as sisters to men, were of equal worth in God's sight. Only this can explain why, uniquely among the classical Western religions, Islaam produced a large number of outstanding female scholars, on whose testimony and sound judgment much of the edifice of Islaam depends.

Since Islaam's earliest days, women had been taking a prominent part in the preservation and narration of hadeeth, and this function continued down through the centuries. At every period in Muslim history, there lived numerous eminent female-traditionists, treated by their brethren with reverence and respect. Biographical notices on very large numbers of them can be found in the last sections of the virtually all biographical dictionaries.

During the lifetime of the Prophet (ﷺ), many women had been not only the cause for prophetic many traditions, but had also been their transmitters to their sisters and brethren in faith. After the Prophet's death, many women Companions, particularly his wives, were looked upon as vital custodians of knowledge, and were approached for instruction by the other Companions, to whom they readily dispensed the rich store that they had gathered in the Prophet's company. The names of Hafsah, Umm Habeebah, Maymanah, Umm Salamah, and 'Aa'ishah, are familiar to every student of hadeeth as being among its earliest and most distinguished transmitters. In particular, 'Aa'ishah is one of the most important figures in the whole history of hadeeth literature - not only as one of the earliest reporters of the largest number of hadeeth, but also as one of their most careful interpreters.

In the period of the Successors, too, women held important positions as traditionists. Hafsah, the daughter of Ibn Seereen, Umm al-Dardaa the Younger (d. 81/700), and 'Amrah bint 'Abdir-Rahmaan, are only a few of the key women traditionists of this period. Iyaas ibn Mu'aawiyah, an important traditionist of the time and a judge of undisputed ability and merit, considered Umm ad-Dardaa to be superior to all the other traditionists of the period, including the celebrated masters of hadeeth like al-Hasan al-Basree and Ibn Seereen.[1] 'Amrah was considered a great authority on traditions related by ‘Aa’ishah. Among her students, Aboo Bakr ibn Hazm, the celebrated judge of Madeenah, was ordered by the Caliph ‘Umar ibn ‘Abdil-‘Azeez to write down all the traditions known on her authority.[2]

After them, ‘Aabidah al-Madaniyyah, ‘Abdah bint Bishr, Umm ‘Umar ath-Thaqafiyyah, Zaynab the granddaughter of ‘Alee ibn ‘Abdillaah ibn ‘Abbaas, Nafeesah bint al-Hasan ibn Ziyaad, Khadeejah Umm Muhammad, ‘Abdah bint ‘Abdir-Rahmaan, and many other women excelled in delivering public lectures on hadeeth. These devout women came from the most diverse backgrounds, indicating that neither class nor gender were obstacles to rising through the ranks of Islaamic scholarship. For example, ‘Aabidah who started life as a slave owned by Muhammad ibn Yazeed, learnt a large number of hadeeth with the teachers in Madeenah. Her master gave her to Habeeb Dahhoon, the great traditionist of Spain, when he visited the holy city on his way to the Hajj. Dahhoon was so impressed by her learning that he freed her, married her, and took her back to Andalusia. There she related over ten thousand traditions on the authority of her Madeenan teachers.[3]

On the other hand, Zaynab bint Sulaymaan (d.142/759) was a princess by birth. Her father was a cousin of as-Saffaah, founder of the ‘Abbaasid dynasty, and had been a governor of Basra, Oman and Bahrain during the caliphate of al-Mansoor. Zaynab, who received a fine education, acquired a mastery of hadeeth and gained a reputation as one of the most distinguished women traditionists of her time. She counted many important male traditionists among her pupils.[4]

This partnership of women with men in the cultivation of the Prophetic Traditions continued in the period when the great anthologies of hadeeth were compiled. A survey of the texts reveals that all the important compilers of traditions from the earliest period received hadeeths from female shuyookh. Every major hadeeth collection gives the names of many women as the immediate authorities of the author. And when these works had been compiled, the women traditionists themselves mastered them, and delivered lectures to large classes of pupils, to whom they would issue their own ijaazahs.[5]

In the fourth century, we find Faatimah bint ‘Abdir-Rahmaan (d. 312/924), known as as-Soofiyyah because of her simple dress her great piety; Faatimah, granddaughter of Aboo Daawood of Sunan fame; Amatul-Waahid (d. 377/987), daughter of the distinguished jurist al-Muhaamilee; Umm al-Fat'h Amatus-Salaam (d. 390/999), daughter of the judge Aboo Bakr Ahmad (d.350/961); Jumu'ah bint Ahmad, and many other women, whose classes were always well-attended by reverential audiences.[6]

The Islamic tradition of female hadeeth scholarship continued in the fifth and sixth centuries of the Hijrah. Faatimah bint al-Hasan ibn 'Alee ibn al-Daqqaaq (d. 480/1087), wife of the famous mystic and traditionist Abul-Qaasim al-Qushayree, was celebrated not only for her piety and her mastery of calligraphy, but also for her knowledge of hadeeth and the high quality of isnaads that she knew. Even more distinguished was Kareemah al-Marwaziyyah (d. 463/1070), who was considered the best authority on the Saheeh al-Bukhaaree in her time. Aboo Dharr of Herat, one of the leading scholars of the period, attached such great importance to her authority that he advised his students to study the Saheeh under no one else, because of the quality of her scholarship. She thus figures as a central point in the transmission of this seminal text of Islaam. "As a matter of fact," writes Goldziher, "her name occurs with extraordinary frequency in the ijaazahs for narrating the text of this book."[7] Among her students were al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee and al-Humaydee (428/1036-488/1095).

Aside from Kareemah, a number of other women traditionists occupy an eminent place in the history of the transmission of the text of the Saheeh. Among these, one might mention in particular Faatimah bint Muhammad (d. 539/1144); Shuhdah bint Ahmad ibn al-Faraj (d.574/1178), and Sitt al-Wuzaraa bint Umar (d. 716/1316). Faatimah narrated the book on the authority of the great traditionist Sa'eed al-'Ayyaar and she received from the hadeeth specialists the proud title of Musnidah Isbahaan (the great hadeeth authority of Isfahan). Shuhdah was a famous calligrapher and a traditionist of great repute. The biographers describe her as the calligrapher, the great authority on hadeeth, and the pride of womanhood. Her great-grandfather had been a dealer in needles, and thus acquired the title al-Ibree. But her father, Aboo Nasr (d. 506/1112) had acquired a passion for hadeeth, and managed to study it with several masters of the subject. In obedience to the sunnah, he gave his daughter a sound academic education, ensuring that she studied under many traditionists of accepted reputation.

She married 'Alee ibn Muhammad, an important figure with some literary interests, who later became a companion of the Caliph al-Muqtafee, and founded a college which he endowed most generously. His wife, however, was better known. She gained her reputation in the field of hadeeth scholarship, and was noted for the quality of her isnaads. Her lectures on Saheeh al-Bukhaaree and other hadeeth collections were attended by large crowds of students as a result of her great reputation.

Also known as an authority on Saheeh al-Bukhaaree was Sitt al-Wuzaraa, who, besides her acclaimed mastery of Islamic law, was known as the musnidah of her time. She delivered lectures on the Saheeh and other works in Damascus and Egypt. Classes on Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, were likewise given by Umm al-Khayr Amatul-Khaaliq (811/1408-911/1505), who is regarded as the last great hadeeth scholar of the Hijaaz. Still another authority on Saheeh al-Bukhaaree was ‘Aa’ishah bint ‘Abdil-Haadee.[8]

Apart from these women, who seem to have specialized in the great Saheeh al-Bukhaaree, there were others, whose expertise was centred on other texts. Ummul-Khayr Faatimah bint ‘Alee (d. 532/1137) and Faatimah ash-Shahrazooriyyah, both delivered lectures on the Saheeh Muslim. Faatimah al-Jawzdaaniyyah (d. 524/1129) narrated to her students the three Musnads of at-Tabaraanee. Zaynab of Harran (d. 688/1289), whose lectures attracted a large crowd of students, taught them the Musnad of Ahmad ibn Hambal, the largest known collection of hadeeths. Juwayriyyah bint ‘Umar (d. 783/1381), and Zaynab bint Ahmad ibn ‘Umar (d. 722/1322), who had travelled widely in pursuit of hadeeth and delivered lectures in Egypt as well as Madeenah, narrated to her students the collections Sunan ad-Daarimee and ‘Abd ibn Humayd work. Students travelled from far and wide to attend her discourses. Zaynab bint Ahmad (d. 740/1339), usually known as Bint al-Kamaal delivered lectures on the Musnad of Aboo Haneefah, Shamaa’il at-Tirmithee, and the Sharh Ma‘aanee al-Aathaar of at-Tahaawee, the last of which she had read with another woman traditionist, Ajeebah bint Abee Bakr (d. 740/1339). Goldziher said: “On her authority is based the authenticity of the Gotha codex... in the same isnaad a large number of learned women are cited who had occupied themselves with this work.” With her, and various other women, the great traveller Ibn Battootah studied traditions during his stay at Damascus.

The famous historian of Damascus, Ibn al-‘Asaakir, who tells us that he had studied under more than 1,200 men and 80 women, obtained the ijaazah of Zaynab bint ‘Abdir-Rahmaan for the Muwatta of Imaam Maalik. Jalaalud-deen as-Suyootee studied the Risaalah of Imaam al-Shaafi‘ee with Haajar bint Muhammad. ‘Afeefud-deen Junayd, a traditionist of the ninth century AH, read Sunanad-Daarimee with Faatimah bint Ahmad ibn Qaasim.

Other important female traditionists included Zaynab bint ash-Sha‘ree (524-615/1129-1218). She studied hadeeth under several leading traditionists, and in turn lectured to many students, some of who gained great repute including Ibn Khallikaan, author of the well-known biographical dictionary Wafaayaat al-A'yaan.[9] Another was Kareemah the Syrian (d. 641/1218), described by the biographers as the greatest authority on hadeeth in Syria of her day. She delivered lectures on many works of hadeeth on the authority of numerous teachers.

In his work ad-Durar al-Kaaminah, Ibn Hajar gives short biographical entries on about 170 prominent women of the eighth century, most of who are traditionists, and under many of whom the author himself had studied. Some of these women were acknowledged as the best traditionists of the period. For instance, Juwayriyyah bint Ahmad, to whom we have already referred, studied a range of works on traditions, under scholars both male and female, who taught at the great colleges of the time, and then proceeded to give famous lectures on the Islamic disciplines. "Some of my own teachers," says Ibn Hajar, "and many of my contemporaries, attended her discourses. 'Aa'ishah bint Abdil-Haadee (723-816), also mentioned above, who for a considerable time was one of Ibn Hajar's teachers, was considered to be the finest traditionist of her time, and many students undertook long journeys in order to sit at her feet and study the truths of religion.[10] Sitt al-'Arab (d. 760/1358) was the teacher of the well-known traditionist al-'Iraaqee (d. 741/1341) and of many others who derived a good proportion of their knowledge from her. Daqeeqah bint Murshid (d. 746/1345), another celebrated woman traditionist, received instruction from a whole range of other women.

Information on women traditionists of the ninth century is given in a work by Muhammad ibn 'Abdir-Rahmaan as-Sakhaawee (830-897/1427-1429), called ad-Daw al-Laami', which is a biographical dictionary of eminent persons of the ninth century. A further source is the Mu'jam ash-Shuyookh of 'Abdul-'Azeez ibn 'Umar ibn Fahd (812-871/1409-1466), compiled in 861 AH and devoted to the biographical notices of more than 1,100 of the author's teachers, including over 130 women scholars under whom he had studied. Some of these women were acclaimed as among the most precise and scholarly traditionists of their time, and trained many of the great scholars of the following generation. Umm Haanee Maryam (778-871/1376-1466), for instance, learnt the Qur'aan by heart when still a child, acquired all the Islamic sciences then being taught, including theology, law, history, and grammar, and then travelled to pursue hadeeth with the best traditionists of her time in Cairo and Makkah. She was also celebrated for her mastery of calligraphy, her command of the Arabic language, and her natural aptitude for poetry, as well as her strict observance of the duties of religion. Her son, who became a noted scholar of the tenth century, showed the greatest veneration for her, and constantly waited on her towards the end of her life. She pursued an intensive programme of lecturing in the great colleges of Cairo, giving ijazaahs to many scholars. Ibn Fahd himself studied several technical works on hadeeth under her.[11]

Her Syrian contemporary, Baa'ee Khaatoon bint Abil-Hasan (d. 1459), studied traditions with Aboo Bakr al-Mizzee and numerous other traditionists, and secured the ijaazahs of a large number of masters of hadeeth, both men and women. She later delivered lectures on the hadeeth in Syria and Cairo. We are told that she took especial delight in teaching. 'Aa'ishah bint Ibraaheem (1358-1438), known in academic circles as Ibnat ash-Sharaa'ihee, also studied traditions in Damascus and Cairo and elsewhere, and delivered lectures which the eminent scholars of the day regularly attended. Umm al-Khayr Sa'eedah of Makkah (d. 850/1446) received instruction in hadeeth from numerous traditionists in different cities, gaining an equally enviable reputation as a scholar.[12]

So far as may be gathered from the sources, the involvement of women in hadeeth scholarship, and in the Islamic disciplines generally, seems to have declined considerably from the tenth century of the Hijrah (15th Century CE) onwards. Books such as an-Noor as-Saafir of al-'Aydaroos, the Khulaasat al-Akhbaar of al-Muhibbee, and the as-Suhub al-Waabilah of Muhammad ibn 'Abdillaah, which are biographical dictionaries of eminent persons of the tenth, eleventh and twelfth centuries of the Hijrah respectively, contain the names of barely a dozen eminent women traditionists. But it would be wrong to conclude from this that after the tenth century, women lost interest in the subject. Some women traditionists, who gained good reputations in the ninth century, lived well into the tenth, and continued their services to the Sunnah. Asmaa bint Kamaalud-Deen (d. 904/1498) wielded great influence with the sultans and their officials, to whom she often made recommendations, which they always accepted. She lectured on hadeeth, and trained women in various Islaamic sciences. 'Aa'ishah bint Muhammad (d. 906/1500), who married the famous judge Muslihud-Deen, taught traditions to many students, and was appointed professor at the Saalihiyyah College in Damascus. Faatimah bint Yoosuf of Aleppo (1465-1519), was known as one of the excellent scholars of her time. Ummul-Khayr granted an ijaazah to a pilgrim at Makkah in the year 1531.

The last woman traditionist of the first rank who is known to us was Faatimah al-Fudayliyyah (d. 1831), also known as ash-Shaykhah al-Fudayliyyah. She was born before the end of the twelfth Islaamic century (18th century CE), and soon excelled in the art of calligraphy and the various Islamic sciences. She had a special interest in hadeeth and read extensively on the subject. Faatimah received the diplomas of a good many scholars, and acquired a reputation as an important traditionist in her own right. Towards the end of her life, she settled at Makkah, where she founded a well-stocked public library. In the City many eminent traditionists attended her lectures and received certificates from her. Among them, one could mention in particular Shaykh ‘Umar al-Hanafee and Shaykh Muhammad Saalih ash-Shaafi‘ee.

Throughout the history of feminine scholarship in Islaam it is clear that the women involved did not confine their study to a personal interest in traditions, or to the private coaching of a few individuals, but took their seats as students as well as teachers in public educational institutions, along with their brothers in faith. The colophons of many manuscripts show them both as students attending large general classes, and also as teachers, delivering regular courses of lectures.

Various notes on the manuscript of the Kitaab al-Kifaayah of al-Khateeb al-Baghdaadee, and of a collection of various treatises on hadeeth, show Ni‘mah bint ‘Alee, Umm Ahmad Zaynab bint al-Makkee, and other women traditionists delivering lectures on these two books, sometimes independently, and sometimes jointly with male traditionists, in major colleges such as the ‘Azeeziyya Madrasah, and the Diya’iyyah Madrasah, to regular classes of students. Some of these lectures were attended by Ahmad, son of the famous general Salaahud-Deen.[13]
